MAY HALT EXECUTION

Delay in Court's Ruling Indicates Sacco, Vanzetti Will Not Die Tonight

Action by Supreme Court Justice Sanderson today indicated that Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will not be put to death tonight.

Judge Sanderson heard the exceptions of defense counsel and notified the attorneys to appear before him tomorrow with their formal appeal.

At tomorrow's session he will decide whether to refer the disputed questions to the full bench of the Supreme Court, in accordance with the plea of the defense.

Sacco—on the verge of dropping into a coma after fasting for more than 24 days—refused his lawyers' pleas to sign a petition to the Federal district court for a writ of habeas corpus.

After spending an hour in the death house, the attorneys left with Vanzetti's signature only.

"I have been crucified enough. I won't let them crucify me again," was Sacco's muttered answer, as he refused to sign.

Sacco-Vanzetti Case in Paris.
Unfortunate Indiscretion.
Ask Our Geese.
Oil—National Safety.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1927, by Star Co.)

PARIS, August 9.—Sacco and Vanzetti continue important news. Rows of soldiers with steel helmets surround the American embassy examining suspicious persons. Look poor, not a workman; or queer, and not an American, and you are suspicious.

Many police protect the American consul's office. Americans, drawing money from the Guaranty Trust in the same building, wonder. Madame Nungesser and Loubet, former president of France, cable America asking clemency; others cable Colonel Lindbergh asking him to intervene. The average Frenchman knows America as little as the average American knows France.

Radical newspapers talk violently. Le Soire with a front page picture carries the caption: "The best plan would be to electrocute America." It suggests no plan for carrying out so large a program.

L'Humanite, commenting on the alleged news that the Massachusetts American Legion approves the Sacco-Vanzetti executions, threatens a boycott that would be ruinous to the United States and says over the signature of P. Vaillant Courutior that if the executions take place the gathering of the American Legion in Paris next month will appear, as regards its managers, comme un congress d'assassins, "like a congress of assassins."

The Fuller committee report that the judge in the case had been "guilty of indiscretion" makes as bad an impression on Americans as on Frenchmen. Any layman talking indiscreetly about the man accused, thus revealing advance prejudice against them, should be withdrawn.

Talk that would make a citizen unfit for the jury should surely make a judge unfit to preside.

MADEIROS CALM AS HE FACES DEATH TONIGHT

Unconcerned over his rapidly approaching death in the electric chair—for he cannot be saved, regardless of what fate has in store for Sacco and Vanzetti—Celestino Madeiros ate heartily today in his cell.

Two short steps from his cell is the door to the execution chamber. A few steps farther away is the death chair. But, facing the dreaded door as he ate, Madeiros hungrily consumed a breakfast of poached eggs, toast and coffee, and a dinner of baked macaroni, coffee, milk, bread and butter, and fruit.

2 NAVAL FLIERS KILLED ON WAY TO ENTER RACE

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Lieuts. George Covell and R. S. Waggener, U. S. N., who left San Diego today in an airplane they had entered in the Dole flight to Honolulu, were killed when the ship crashed at Point Loma near San Diego.

Less than 15 minutes after they hopped off at North Island for Oakland airport, Covell and Waggener crashed to the ground, their plane immediately bursting into flames.

Surrounding brush was set afire and an alarm was sent to Ocean Beach.

The scene of the crash is a short distance beyond the Fort Rosecrans reservations.

ARREST 71 IN CHICAGO RIOT LED BY GIRL OF 16

Chicago, Aug. 10 (U.N.S.)—Three riots involving thousands of men and women broke out on the West Side, stronghold of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, today. Charges of police with machine guns and tear bombs in readiness smashed three protest parades. Two women and four men were arrested. Thirty motorcycle officers and thirty mounted police rushed to the district.

Chicago, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Led by a 16-year-old girl, a mob, numbering 4,000 men and women, alternately roaring the "Third Internationle," battle song of the world radicals, and shouting "Mob the police," marched toward the Loop district early today.

It was dispersed only after a clash with police reserves, who resorted to tear bombs and revolver shots.

Sixty-seven men and four women, including the girl leader—Aurora D'Angelo, pretty, bobbed-haired high school girl—were arrested. Several persons were reported injured as the mob broke and fled before the stubborn police resistance.

THEOPHILUS KING, OF QUINCY, MUCH BETTER

Theophilus King, millionaire philanthropist and head of the Granite Trust Company of Quincy, who was stricken at his home ten days ago, is rapidly regaining normal health.

Based upon information which the Boston Evening American believed to be accurate, two early editions of the Boston Evening American today carried a story that Mr. King's condition was critical. This information was wrong, and the Boston Evening American regrets its publication.

2 MEN HURT IN WEST END 'BOMB' EXPLOSION

Two men were badly burned, and a blacksmith shop on Alden court, West End, was wrecked today by a mysterious explosion believed to have been caused by a bomb.

The victims, who were taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, were Daniel McMillan, proprietor of the shop, and Edward Dickinson, manager of the Royal Laundry next door.

Perlin Chartier, an explosives expert, together with State police and members of the Fire Prevention Bureau, were called to make an investigation.

McMillan was working at his forge, according to the police, when an explosion rolled him to the floor, and rocked the building. Dickinson, knowing the blacksmith to be alone in the shop, rushed from the laundry to his assistance.

As he entered the blacksmith shop a second detonation swept him from his feet, and stretched him unconscious on the floor beside the man he had attempted to help.

The shop took fire and when members of Engine 4 arrived, the ruins of the building were burning.

could keep the two condemned men alive until tomorrow.

Governor Fuller could grant a respite with consent of his council. On the other hand, either he or the attorney-general could simply notify the warden to wait a day. Warden Hendry was awaiting such notification. If he chose, he could wait on his own initiative.

From the Suffolk County Courthouse, where he appeared before Judge Sanderson, Attorney Arthur D. Hill, chief defense attorney, rushed to the State House where the Governor's Council was meeting in special session, supposedly for the purpose of receiving a recommendation from Governor Fuller for a respite.

But the Governor would give no definite intimation that he intended to ask his council to consent to a respite. He spent most of the forenoon in unprecedented conference with every living ex-Attorney-General except one, who is on his vacation and could not be reached.

Those who attended this conference tussled with legal problems connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti case and a possible respite, while Attorney-General Arthur K. Reading was before Judge Sanderson, representing the State on the matter of the appeal.

There were seven former attorneys-general present—Jay R. Benton, J. Weston Allen, Herbert Parker, Henry A. Wyman, Thomas J. Boynton, James M. Swift and Albert E. Pillsbury.

The first move today was the filing of a complete bill of exceptions by defense counsel, in which they supported their brief appeal filed yesterday, taking exceptions to Judge Sanderson's ruling of Monday

STATE HOUSE 'DEATH WATCH' RESUMED

Defying the Boston police, twenty-five Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, most of them young boys and girls, resumed the "death watch" picket line in front of the State House this afternoon.

The pickets, bearing inflammatory placards, were led by a youth of twenty-five, and within a few moments a crowd of more than 500 curious persons were drawn to the scene.

Police reserves who were drawn to the scene gave their attention to the spectators, rather than the pickets, and tried, unsuccessfully, to drive the crowds away. The pickets, for the time being, were not molested as they slowly walked up and down in single file, in front of the State House.

PARADE NIPPED IN BUD.

A second "Death March" was nipped in the bud by the police, when more than twenty students from New York, carrying banners, were halted by the police as they filed from the meeting hall at No. 21 Essex street.

As the students and their placards started from the hall, they were promptly halted by the police, the placards were taken away from them and they were politely informed to return to the hall, which they did.

Later, Alfred Baker Lewis, who had charge of the demonstration in front of the State House, told reporters forty more paraders were in the hall waiting for word from Sacco-Vanzetti headquarters and if the Governor and Council did not take action favorable to Sacco and Vanzetti, another demonstration would be staged, regardless of the police.

Four Boston detectives, Joseph L. Murphy, Frank V. Sullivan, William McGovern and William Goldman, are stationed outside the walls of the Essex street hall.

N. Y. STUDENTS DISPLEASED.

Every person entering the hall is searched for weapons, while the detectives, reported by the police, the placards were taken away from them and they were politely informed to return to the hall, which they did.

The score who had their names taken over and were forced back into the hall were all from New York and all are said to be college students who came to Boston today with the expressed determination to show to Boston their displeasure with the action the courts and Governor have taken in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Three of the 19 persons arrested for staging Tuesday's "death march" in front of the State House were found guilty in Municipal Court today of assuming and loitering, and also of obstructing traffic. Their cases were continued to August 12th for disposition.

They were Mrs. Grace Hutchins, No. 166 Beacon street; Herman Kobbe, Nassau, N. Y., and William Murdock.

The cases of the other defendants, with one exception, were continued to the same date, although Judge Joseph T. Zottoli declared he would find guilty all persons who took part in the parade.

The exception was Gussie Gassman of Hubbard street, Malden, who was found to be a minor, and whose case was heard in the juvenile session. This was also continued.

The proceedings before Judge Zottoli were featured by the ejection of several girl defendants by an irate court officer who took offense at their giggles.

"You can't eject them," shouted Attorney Joseph Bearak, counsel for all the defendants.

Ejected they were, however, although the clerk was forced to go and bring them back.

The courtroom was crowded when the cases of the Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers went on trial. Despite the fact that police and court officers on guard at the doors and in the corridors refused to permit anyone to enter who had no business there, there was a large assemblage of defendants, witnesses and lawyers connected with other cases.

Thayer Has Quiet Day Under Guard of Two Police

Worcester, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Judge Thayer passed the forenoon today on the porch of his home, reading and smoking, while a guard of two policemen did duty around the house.

Trunks from the judge's summer home in Maine arrived about 10 o'clock and he left the porch to inspect them.

Shortly before noon Judge Thayer decided it was good golf weather and, accompanied by his son and a State policeman who has acted as his personal bodyguard for several weeks, he drove to a country club for a round of golf.

PIN LAST SACCO PLEA ON COURT 'PREJUDICE'

The alleged prejudice of Judge Webster Thayer and the charge that the verdict of the jury in convicting Sacco and Vanzetti "was plainly wrong" were the basis of the appeal filed by Sacco-Vanzetti attorneys in the Supreme Court today in the final effort to save the radicals from the chair.

The petition also alleged that Judge Thayer's finding of fact in the trial was wrong.

Three attorneys, Arthur D. Hill Elias Field and Richard C. Everts, signed the petition which was filed with John C. Cronin, clerk of the Supreme Court.

The petition in substance alleged the three following assignments of error:

MAKE THREE CLAIMS.

1.—That the judge who presided at the trial of the petitioners and thereafter was so prejudiced against them that they never received such trial as they were entitled to under the constitutions of the Commonwealth and of the United States.

2.—That it appears from the record the findings of the jury were plainly wrong.

3.—That it appears from the record the findings of fact made by the presiding judge during the trial and thereafter were plainly wrong.

Reference was then made in the bill to the rulings of Judge Sanderson when he refused a writ of error. Concluding, the petition says:

"The foregoing, together with the affidavits referred to, is all the testimony material to the issues herein involved. The respondent filed no counter affidavits. At the close of the hearing the court denied a writ of error, to and from which ruling the petitioners duly excepted and appealed.

"The petition was heard before Judge Sanderson in Supreme Judicial Court on August 8, 1927. The court tried the case of affidavits annexed to the petition which may be referred to and are made a part of this bill of exceptions and also upon affidavits filed at the time of the hearing, which may also be referred to and are made a part of this bill of exceptions.

ROW AMONG COUNSEL.

"The only oral testimony was the testimony of William G. Thompson, who testified in substance as follows: 'I am an attorney-at-law, practicing in Boston and have been a member of the bar since 1891. At the time of the trial of the petitioners for murder in the first degree I was asked by John W. McAnarney, brother of one of the counsel at that time for the petitioners, to come to the courthouse a Dedham, where the case had gone on trial.

"'I arrived at the courthouse before court opened and met in an anteroom with Thomas and Jeremiah McAnarney, counsel for the petitioners; Mrs. Sacco, wife of the petitioner Sacco, and one Fred W. Moore, who assumed to be counsel for Sacco.

"'There was altercation at which Mrs. Sacco asked Mr. Moore to withdraw from the case and he refused to do so. I sat for three and a half hours in the courtroom that day, either while the jury was being selected or while evidence was going in.

SAYS THAYER SNEERED.

"'I noticed particularly Judge Thayer's attitude toward Mr. Moore, who was then acting as counsel for Sacco. Whenever Mr. Moore objected and Judge Thayer over-ruled his objections, the judge would turn to the jury or such of them as had been empannelled, and over-ruled the objection with what I can only characterize as a sneer.

"'Judge Thayer's attitude toward Mr. Moore on that day was such as I can only characterize as contemptuous as shown by his actions and expression of face.'"

The petitioners being aggrieved by the foregoing ruling of the court and deprived of their rights under the constitution of the Commonwealth and of the United States thereby hereby present this bill of exceptions and pray that it be allowed.

300 STRIKE FOR SACCO AT WATERTOWN FACTORY

Three hundred men and women employed in the clothing manufacturing shop of M. S. Kondazian, Coolidge Hill road, Watertown, went on strike today in protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The walkout took place at 12:30 o'clock and the strike will last until tomorrow morning, according to leaders, who said every employe was out. The strikers held a meeting, at which a telegram was sent to Governor Fuller asking a pardon for the condemned men. The strikers are not affiliated with any labor organization.

RADICAL FORCES ARE FLOCKING INTO BOSTON

Radicals from all parts of the country poured into Boston today in anticipation of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

New York furnished most of the visitors, although a large delegation under the leadership of Powers Hapgood is due to arrive here from Chicago this today.

Suddenly Hapgood arrived from New York today with Peggy Tucker, secretary of the New York Civic Club. They brought copies of a New York labor paper which had big headlines, "Go to Boston—They Plan to Kill Sacco and Vanzetti Tonight."

EDITOR SEEKS 'SACCO'S MESSAGE TO THE WORLD'

P. A. Santosuosso, editor of the Italian News of Boston, arrived at the prison this afternoon and stated he had received a message from Sacco asking him to visit the death house to receive a message he desired to broadcast to the Italian people throughout the world.

Warden Hendry told Santosuosso it was against the law for any one to visit Sacco with the exception of counsel and the immediate families. It is now expected Sacco will deliver his message to his wife or his counsel.

POLICE POSTED AT MILLS IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Aug. 10.—Motorcycle police and detectives of the Lawrence police force at noon today guarded the mill gates in Lawrance to prevent the distribution of anarchist literature by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

Several strangers have been in town for several days past and the police have come into possession of inflamatory circulars printed in many languages which these men have been distributing among mill workers.

ASK EDISON AND FORD TO GET U. S. ACTION

The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, in an eleventh hour effort to secure Federal intervention in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, today wired Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison, urging them to wire President Coolidge to take a hand in the case.

The telegrams were inspired by Mrs. Ford's statement, issued last night, in which he declared his opposition to capital punishment.

The Defense committee urges, in the telegrams, that the famous Mooney case, which was investigated by a Federal commission, be cited to the President as a precedent on which to act. The telegram to Ford follows:

"Sacco and Vanzetti die tonight unless heroic efforts are made to secure Coolidge intervention with Wilson Federal inquiry into Mooney case as precedent. Desperately urge you to wire Coolidge your great press message of this morning with recommendations to act at once to save America's honor. Urge you also to wire Thomas Edison to exert his influence on Coolidge.

"Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee."

That sent Edison read:

"Sacco and Vanzetti die tonight to eternal shame of America unless immediate heroic efforts are made to secure Coolidge intervention. In this hour of national stress we desperately urge you to raise your voice in behalf of the two condemned revolutionists and support Henry Ford's magnificent plea for them. We urge you to wire President Coolidge to intervene to follow President Wilson's precedent in Mooney case and appoint Federal inquiry into entire case.

"Sacco-Vanzetti Defence Committee."

HAWAII MUST BE GUARDED FROM AIR, SAYS HERO

Lieutenant Albert F. Hegenberger today told of his flight experiences to a group of 50C Rotarians in the Hotel Statler. His talk told of the great part navigational instruments played in the military possessions of Hawaii.

"Military possession and protection of the Hawaiian Islands is absolutely necessary to the United States," said Hegenberger. "With the long range of aircrafts, Ha-ai-i is no longer isolated, but is a landing place in the Pacific.

HOW TO UROTECT HAWAII

"It is necessary that the Army be able to protect Hawaii by certain and sure air routes to the islands," the flier told his listeners.

"Without adequate navigational instruments it is impossible to do accurate work or safe flying over long distances," Hegenberger said. "Until pilots began to make long flips Indicators were unnecessary. The aviators depended upon vision. Consequently they were sometimes fifty miles wrong."

INSTRUMENTS ESSENTIAL

In the 2,409-mile cloudy trip to Hawaii, Hegenberger declared that without his instruments neither he nor his co-flier, Maitland, would have dropped exactly on the islands in the right time.

He pointed out that as a factor of military defense of the ocean the airplane was now indispensable.

At the conclusion of the luncheon President Maynard presented Hegenberger with a silver honorary membership in the Rotary.

The only other speaker was Theodore Hetland, who made a short introductory talk on Hegenberger's life.

300-Pound Pig in Fleet Race Wins Brief Respite

A 300-pound black hog gained half an hour respite from the abattoir today and tangled norn traffic at Massachusetts avenue and Linpaean street, Cambridge, while scores of autoists leaped to the assistance of police and pedestrians in lassoing the errant porker.

Traffic Officer Joseph H. Kelley was the first to wrestle with the A. W. O. L. hog. After a flying tackle, in which he got a headlock by both ears, he was tossed for a five-yard loss to his dignity. Others emulated the policeman's valor with as disappointing results. Over lawn and doorstep, weaving in and out of traffic from curb to curb, Piggy led the park. If he paused for breath the crowd kept a respectful distance. Then a lasso was lent by a passing truck-driver and the porker soon was hog-tied, as it were.

LINDY TOLD TO EXPLAIN—IF HE SMOKED

Indianapolis, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Charles M. Fillmore, general secretary of the No-Tobacco League of America, today telegraphed Charles A. Lindbergh, asking Lindbergh if he smoked a cigarette at a dinner in Cincinnati and if he made the statement that he would not "Be played for a tin saint." Fillmore added that he also planned to communicate with Lindbergh's mother on the subject.

Lindbergh here denied he had smoked the cigarette as a result of a dinger or that he had made the statement that if members of a women's national organization "persist in keeping after me, I'm going to take a drink."

The lone eagle added that he was not an habitual user of tobacco. He replied "no" when asked whether he drank water to all of the toasts while in Europe.

GANGSTERS SHOOT TWO TO DEATH IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The bodies of two men, believed to have been "taken for a ride" and shot to death in the usual gangster fashion, were found lying on a suburban road early today.

Shattered glass and a number of 45 calibre pistol shells strewed the road near the bodies, indicating the men had been shot in an automobile and their bodies tossed out. The men apparently were Italians.

Haverhill, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Mrs. Maude E. French, 44, No. 14 Crescent street, committed suicide in the kitchen of her home by inhaling illuminating gas. Her husband, returning from work, found her dead in the kitchen, with gas pouring from open jets. She was despondent.

CHORUS GIRL'S HUB BOMB TIP JAILS MAN

New York, Aug. 10.—Admitting he telephoned a show girl in Boston a warning to "stay off the subways, they're going to be blown up," Joseph Zucker, alias Jack Baker, was arraigned today in Tombs court as a suspicious character.

According to Inspector John D. Coughlin, Zucker said he transmitted the message "as a joke."

The girl was said to be Catherine Moylan, playing this week in Boston. Frightened by the sinister warning, she notified Boston police, who in turn informed authorities here and Zucker was arrested today.

Police declared Zucker has a record of twelve previous arrests, mostly for pocket picking and robbery. He began a term in Elmira penitentiary in 1910.

Police said he is on $70,000 bail in a pocket picking charge brought July 7.

DEFENSE SPEEDS FINAL EFFORTS TO SAVE DOOMED SLAYERS

VANZETTI CLINGS TO HOPE IN SHADOW OF DEATH

when he refused to issue a writ of error.

Judge Banderson was in court, handling routine matters on the docket when this bill of exceptions was filed. The bill as brought to his clerk, John F. Cronin, by an assistant clerk, John F. Flynn. Cronin handed it to the judge.

After fixing noontime as the hour for meeting counsel, he then got his hat and left the courthouse to get them to meet him immediately in his lobby.

The exceptions were based chiefly on two things—alleged prejudice of Judge Thayer and the verdict of the jury.

ASK FOR REVIEW

"It appears from the record that the finding of the jury was plainly wrong," the bill read. The defense asks a review of the facts in the case, as well as the law.

When the conference in the judge's lobby with Attorney-General Reading and Atty. Hill ensued, it was over. Atty. Hill told newspapermen:

"We agreed on the form in which to go before the full bench, if Judge Banderson decides he has the power and duty to report it to the higher tribunal.

"We will now proceed to put the exceptions in the desired form, appending the affidavits which accompanied our original petition for a writ of error.

"We have an agreement to appear before Judge Sanderson tomorrow with these papers."

Hill then went to the State House, where he found the members of the Governor's Council all present, but not in session. He said he expected he might be called before the council himself.

After a long wait, the councillors left for luncheon, saying they would not return for two hours. The former attorneys-general, who had been with the Governor, also left the State House.

VISIT DEATH HOUSE

It was pointed out unofficially that Warden Hendry of State Prison would put the execution over for a day or two, at the request of Governor Fuller, without the necessity of a formal respite. The execution may take place at any time within the week beginning at midnight tonight. A respite would be necessary to postpone it longer.

The first definite move to put the case in the United States courts came when an associate of Attorney Hill conferred with the clerk of the Federal District Court about the proper form for a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Two other lawyers went to the death house at the same time to get the signatures of the condemned men. These two were Attorney M. A. Musmanno and Attorney Alphonse Gaigiolo.

"I won't sign anything. I won't be tied to die now."

Repeated over and over, these let them crucify me again. I'm atwords were Sacco's answer to the lawyers who tried for an hour to get his signature to the application for a writ of habeas corpus in Federal Court.

"I'm satisfied to die on the cross," he said at the end, according to Attorney Musmanno.

Vanzetti, on the other hand, said he hoped the paper he signed would help Sacco, as well as himself.

PENS 'LAST WORDS'

He carried on an animated conversation about philosophy and asked Musmanno to take out with him two books, on the flyleaves of which he had penned his "last message to the world."

These books were "The Rise of American Civilization" and "Twelve Stories and a Dream."

Musmanno told Vanzetti that he would not take the books, saying: "To take them would look as if I did not expect to see you again. I do expect to see you again, more than once."

"Vanzetti also spoke about Emerson's Essays and mentioned Jefferson and Ingersoll as among his favorite writers," said Musmanno. "I was surprised at his learning and the breadth of his education."

Dr. McLaughlin, who made his daily visit to the death house, was called back by a guard as he was leaving. The guard said Sacco wanted to see him again.

"I just wanted to thank you again," Sacco told the prison physician. "You've been very good to me."

BARE BOMB PLOT

They shook hands again. Vanzetti had previously said his fare well to the doctor.

A new mystery witness, whose name was kept secret, was interviewed today by Atty. Richard G. Evarts, one of Atty. Hill's associates in the last fight for Sacco and Vanzetti. Evarts went out of town for this interview. Hill said the witness is of great importance.

The advance guard of the crowd expected tonight at State Prison gathered during the forenoon and watched with curiosity everybody who entered the prison main gate. The watchers, numbering about 100, were kept about 40 yards from the wall on Austin street at the corner of Washington street, directly opposite the main gate.

Mrs. Glendower Evans was an early arrival. She went to the prison office to await the arrival of Mrs. Sacco, saying she was seeking her love to both Sacco and Vanzetti.

Neither man was told of the possibility of a respite, Warden Hendry explaining: "It is not my office to tell them anything of the sort until there is something definite."

Vanzetti was spending his time writing as usual and was sitting at other members of the force.

Lafayette Grandson Asks Clemency Of Fuller

Paris, Aug. 10 (I.N.S.)—Marquis de Lasteyrie, grandson of Gen. Lafayette, today protested against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

In a cablegram to Governor Alvin T. Fuller of Massachusetts, the Marquis said:

"As a grandson of Lafayette, founder of American liberty, I join my voice of France and Europe in requesting clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti."

The Communist newspaper Humanite printed a cartoon of a flag with an electric execution chair and a skull and crossbones upon it, with the caption underneath: "The new star spangled banner."

'THEIR ONE HOPE'

Atty. Arthur D. Hill, chief counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, who has announced that he is in the fight until the very end, is shown here in action in one of his many maneuvers to save their lives.

CLASH IN EAST CAMBRIDGE IS FEARED

Feeling over the Sacco-Vanzetti situation was tense in East Cambridge today. Numerous stores were closed and their proprietors and clerks joined throngs on the street discussing the famous case.

Police Chief John J. McBride sent his men into the district with orders to keep the crowds moving. No group was allowed to congregate for more than a few minutes.

Extra precautions were taken in the "Gold Coast" district, where during the famous strikes, a raids conducted by the present Attorney-General Arthur K. Reading. Then district attorney, much radical literature was found. In addition to Cambridge police, the State constabulary maintained a patrol in these sections of the city.

Every precaution believed possible has been taken by Cambridge police to guard against disturbances. At the three police stations reserves and riot guns are held in readiness for a quick move to any part of the city. Night men were held over until 4 o'clock today and the shifts of the day men will be likewise extended. Automobiles were kept in readiness at all three stations.

Police guards were maintained in the vicinity of Harvard buildings and in the streets of the exclusively residential sections. Traffic officers and motorcycle patrols were especially vigilant in watching autos entering the city by way of Watertown, Belmont and Somerville. These precautions were taken as a result of information that radicals from all parts of the country were heading for Boston by automobiles and train.

Railroad tracks, the Cambridge subway stations, power plants, public buildings and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology were guarded.

A close watch was also maintained on the numerous bridges between Cambridge and Boston.

Most of the manufacturing plants of the city maintained their own guards, although in some instances city officers were on hand when the workers poured into the streets at noon.

The closest watch was maintained by police in districts where radicals are known to work and live. As the crowds increased, so did the number of police sent by Chief McBride to check any outbreak. At the armories there were also signs of activity.

N. Y. UNDER A HEAVY GUARD

New York, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Police today resoubled their vigilance against possible disorder as the hour for the scheduled execution of Sacco and Vanzetti drew near.

There was to be no relaxation "until further notice," it was said, despite the fact that the city rode through a day of strikes which did not appear to disturb business, and protest demonstrations that resulted in few disorders.

Mobilization of the city's 14,000 policemen was maintained. Outside headquarters a flying squadron of fourteen motorcycles and two armored cars equipped with machine guns and tear gas bombs were kept on twenty-four-hour duty.

State Police Will Guard Boston

At State Police headquarters preparations for guarding life and property in Boston went swiftly ahead today. Practically all of the detective branch of the organization were on duty in the North, South and West Ends of the city, listening and watching.

By tonight practically all of the State troopers with the exception of a skeleton force to guard the barracks, will have been mobilized in Greater Boston. They will enter the city by twos and threes, no attempt being made for a display of force. In the city they will be assigned to vital points as will the detectives and

65 GUARD COOLIDGE FROM SACCO ATTACK

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 10 (I.N.S.)—As the hour for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti neared, the secret service became sufficiently apprehensive of a possible demonstration at the Summer White House to increase its staff. A Chicago operative arrived here this morning.

Guarding President Coolidge now are thirteen secret service men and fifty-two soldiers. Officials expressed confidence that even should some fanatic attempt anything, he could not get near enough to the State game lodge to do any damage.

Arrested in Sacco Case

Charged with distributing Sacco-Vanzetti circulars and thereby violating a town by-law, Enrico Parenti, 33, of Palfrey street, Watertown, was arrested in that town today. Parenti was one of a group distributing circulars to factory workers,

CHANCE YET FOR DOOMED MEN TO TURN TO GOD

Will Sacco and Vanzetti again embrace the religion of their fathers before they begin their last walk on this earth? Or will they cling to the teachings of the atheist that there is no God to judge and forgive?

These are two questions that are uppermost in the minds of the men of the death watch at State Prison, who, day and night, every hour and every minute, have watched the two Italian Socialistic Materialists in the shadow of the execution chair.

Will they, at the last moment on this earth, send for the clergymen of the religion, into whose arms they were handed when babes a few days or years old, to find comfort in the prayers taught them at their mothers' knees and which has braced all mankind in the hour of making the great adventure?

MAY TURN TO CHURCH.

Or will they pass silently out like the tide in the darkness of the night, their hearts mailed with the armor of the disbeliever?

Prison officials seem to have a feeling they will seek the comfort of the church before the afternoon sun casts its last bright rays on the gloomy walls of the prison and the death house marking the line between life and eternity. At least they hope they will.

The latter hope is maintained to even a greater extent by the two prison chaplains, the Rev. Michael J. Murphy and the Rev. Bradley Whitman. They are ever ready to walk to the edge with men meeting the supreme ordeal. They are waiting and hoping for the call that will permit them to extend the comfort of the teachings that have lived in the hearts of man down through the ages and which is denied no one.

LAST RITES FOR MADEIROS.

Celestino Madeiros, who, too, must die, will probably receive the last rites of his church before taking his last walk on earth. Even in the shadow of death, Madeiros' last thoughts are of the little old lady, his mother, who taught him the prayers he will say. A mother never forgets.

Of Vanzetti and Sacco, the former seems nearer to asking for spiritual comfort as the clock on the death house wall ticks off the fleeting minutes. Will he reach out his hands toward the rays of sunlight, trying to break through the painted glass of the death house skylight and cry "Come!"

Vanzetti has already had a talk with the Rev. Bradley Whitman, the Protestant chaplain. He asked him to come again. Will he ask him or will he go out trying to make the world and eternity believe that even in death he is an Anarchist, believing in neither God nor country?

HOURS ARE FLEETING.

And what of Sacco? The gaunt Sacco, weak from his long hunger strike and who must take final leave today of the loyal wife and the little girl he too handed into the waiting arms of religion just as he had been handed as a babe? Sacco, who grips the bars of his cell door with his long, lean hands and stares at the sunlight trying to reach the shadows of his cell, will he too send out a call?

The hours of the day are fleeting. The shadows in the death house are deepening. The last rays of a mid-summer sun are glinting on the church spires, the houses of God. On the steps their teachers are waiting, watching and waiting for a message from the death house—a call for the spiritual comfort that lets them die like men.

Marine Band Concert at Washington Called Off

Washington, Aug. 10 (I.N.S.)—The regular weekly concert by the Marine Band on the Capitol plaza was called off today at the request of the Department of Justice.

Justice officials explained that they did not want crowds to congregate around the Capitol for fear of possible reprisals by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers. Double precautions were taken at all Federal buildings as the hour approaches for the execution of the condemned men.

Italian Envoy Denies Conference on Sacco

Washington, Aug. 10 (I.N.S.)—Nobile De Martino, Italian Ambassador, had a long conference at the State Department today with William R. Castle, assistant secretary.

The ambassador declared he had not brought up the Sacco-Vanzetti case and declined to discuss the nature of the conference.

Mrs. Coolidge Urged to 'Rise' and Save Sacco

New York, Aug. 10 (A. P.).—An appeal to Mrs. Coolidge to seek the intervention of the President in behalf of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti was made today by Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

A telegram from Miss Baron to Mrs. Coolidge urged that she show the world that women can rise to heights of grandeur by taking a step to keep the working class family of Sacco from being made fatherless at midnight tonight.

FRENCH SEND 'KISSES' BY VANZETTI'S SISTER

Paris, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—A commet ter of French symposiums today cabled to Sacco and Vanzetti: "We are in agony, but all the universe is for you. We cannot believe that America is against you. You will live."

The message to Vanzetti added: "Your sister, Luigia, is embarking tonight. May she soon hold you in her arms and give you our fraternal kisses."

Debs Radio Will Broadcast Sacco-Vanzetti News

New York, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Last-minute news of Sacco and Vanzetti, including reports of the death scene, will be broadcast over station WSOM, according to arrangements announced by the Debs memorial radio committee today.

Socialists announced that they would set up a loud speaker outside their headquarters at 11 o'clock tonight.

Station WSOM is estimated by G. August Garber, secretary of the fund, to have a normal range of about 250 miles. It is a 500-watt station, operating on a 245.8 meter wave length.

Inventor Lloyd Dead

Menominee, Mich., Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Marshall B. Lloyd, wealthy manufacturer, and nationally known as the inventor of the Lloyd loom, is dead of heart disease. He was known as the inventor of a loom for weaving fiber furniture, by which baby carriages are made.

SACCO DOOMED BY 'PHARISEES' POPE IS TOLD

New York, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Intervention of Pope Pius XI. was requested today by the Sacco-Vanzetti liberation committee, a local organization of sympathizers with the condemned men, in a cablegram addressed to the Vatican in Rome.

The cable read in part:

"The Pharisees of Massachusetts will kill them over the protests of the people. Your intervention would be in keeping with the Christian religion."

Sacco and Vanzetti are professed atheists.

Rome, Aug. 10.—Influential friends of Sacco and Vanzetti endeavored to secure intercession by the Vatican for the two condemned Italians, urging "humanitarian reasons." The Vatican response was curt and definite, to the effect that the Holy Office "could not see how any appeal was possible, since the men had already been condemned through due process of law, without consideration for the principles of justice." Placards and signs appeared in many parts of Rome on walls and buildings, reading, "We Want Justice, Not Piety." The police promptly tore them down.

TENSE AIR OVER PRISON AS ZERO HOUR NEARS

EYES OF THE WORLD FOCUSED ON BAY STATE DEATH-HOUSE

The eyes of the world are focused today upon the grim gray walls of State's Prison on Prison Point, Charlestown. Beneath that cupola-crowned, octagon-shaped ancient building of hand-hewed stone flanked by ivy-clad red brick wings, the stage is being set for one of the greatest dramas in the history of the Commonwealth.

In the smutty-like death house, where the clock is ticking off the hours and precious minutes, three men, Sacco, Vanzetti and Madeiros, are waiting to pay the death penalty, two of them after one of the greatest legal battles the country has ever known.

"CHAIR" IS READY.

Near—so near that they can almost reach out and touch it with their hands—is the electric chair in which the State has decreed they must die.

Its yawning arms are wide open. From the arms and legs dangle the straps and curling snake-like about its huge bulk are the black wires that at the touch of the executioner's hands at the switch will carry the deadly current to its destination.

The deadly instrument is ready. The electricians and executioner have seen to it that there will be no hitch and no last minute failure of the machinery aimed to send human lives into eternity.

Throughout the prison office, the shops and the entire institution there is an air of tenseness. Before the sun again paints the eastern walls of the grim old prison three men are doomed to die.

FLOWERS BLOOM THERE.

On the broad walk leading from the death house to the prison office a policeman paces to and fro. His eyes are everywhere, sometimes on the walls of the death house; sometimes on the tiny white specks of the gulls circling about in the blue space. About him is the rumble of machinery in the prison shops, the panting of clanking freight locomotives in the busy yards of the Boston & Maine.

Outside, in the glad sunshine and on the Chapman street side, the few trees are whipped by a brisk northwest wind. In the area along the prison wall old-fashioned flowers nod their bright blossoms as if in effort to offset the sombre aspect of the institution.

Automobiles and trucks of all kinds roll by the prison on the Chapman street side. Eyes scan the walls as persons pass.

LIGHTS ARE READY.

Most of them know that within the stage is set for one of the greatest tragedies of life—which is death.

Over on the Rutherford avenue side the scene is different. Because of the seriousness of the situation this great traffic artery has been closed. All except a few pedestrians are prohibited from going beyond the barriers.

Uniformed police see to it that they don't. Plain clothes men, scattered here and there, clinz to the shadows of the prison walls, ever alert and watching as though a heavy section of the world rested upon their shoulders.

Newspaper reporters and cameramen swarm about the avenue and the prison gate. They never seem to stop. No detail of the precautions escaped their eyes, even to the mounting of the two big searchlights on the walls, which will turn night into day in case of a demonstration.

About the Rutherford avenue gate police are ever watchful. Just beyond them are hidden the machine guns. The men who know them and their work, hope that they won't be needed. But the majesty of the law must be upheld.

The curtain is about to go up on the last act of a tragedy that is gripping the entire world.

MADEIROS IS DOOMED

saved for that length of time, too. But within a week from midnight tonight he must be put to death under the law.

The apparent doubt as to the exact night of his death distressed him not at all, as far as the death watch guards could judge from outward appearances.

He wrote his daily letter to his mother. He read magazines. He slept at odd intervals and took a little exercise by pacing slowly around in his narrow cell.

Madeiros requested Father Murphy, Catholic chaplain of the prison, to visit him last week, but since that time he has not sought spiritual consolation. He had been visited several times previously by another priest.

Five times he was granted a respite. Twice he was tried for his crime—the slaying of a Wrentham bank cashier during a holdup. He "confessed" to the crime for which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted and his confession was the basis of a new trial plea in their behalf, but the alleged confession was disbelieved by the courts and by Governor Fuller, as well as by the Governor's advisory investigation committee.

At one time during his imprisonment he coulld hardly eat. Causes of serious stomach trouble and the last time he was in the death house he almost collapsed, but today he appeared strong and well and ready for the ordeal.

POLICEMAN BEATEN IN ROCHESTER SACCO RIOT

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Patrolman John McGrath was beaten and seriously injured when a mob which was attempting to join its way into Convention Hall to attend a Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting became riotous. His condition was reported at St. Mary's Hospital as critical.

Police reserves battled the crowd with night sticks and tear bombs. Several strikers sustained minor injuries.

meeting at the Ashland Auditorium, was marching toward the City Hall and Federal Building, urged on by the girl, who cried: "On, comrades! Mob the police! Strike! Strike! Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!"

GIRL LEADS RIOTERS

Automobiles in the street were smashed, and windows were broken as the crowd surged toward the Loop.

This meeting at the Auditorium had passed quietly enough, the 2,000 who attended passing resolutions of protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti executions and then moving out in orderly fashion to the street. There they congregated, being joined by others, with new leaders calling for a protest parade into the Loop.

Miss D'Angelo was among them and at once took command.

"I'm an anarchist," she cried, "and my father was an anarchist. Follow me!"

The street was soon filled for three blocks with men and women, massed from curb to curb and moving toward the Loop.

As the mob surged forward it picked up recruits. The first violence came when those at the front seized an automobile, stashed its tires, broke its windows and swept on, leaving the driver terror-stricken.

HALTED BY BULLETS.

Next a street car was halted, the trolley pulled from the wire, while men and women crowded aboard shouting "Strike! Strike!" terrorizing the passengers. Another car was halted and the same scene repeated.

By the time the parade neared the downtown district police reserves were speeding to meet the march, and as the procession swung toward an intersection it was met with tear bombs and threatening pistols in the hands of the reserves.

The police charged the crowd, using clubs and tear gas bombs.

Several sisters were trampled in the wild scramble to escape. Windows were shattered, doors broken down and many were damaged.

Miss D'Angelo, her flimsy dress partly torn from her shoulders in the wild milling of her followers, stood on the board of an automobile as the break came.

"I'm only a kid," she shouted. "But I guess I know what I'm talking about. Let me talk!"

Two policemen stopped the automobile and pulled her down. She broke from them and ran nearly two blocks before she was caught. When trapped she pounded and kicked the officers.

The girl has been taking a high school course preparatory to the study of law. One of her lieutenants in the demonstration was a University of Chicago student, Dave Wollins, twenty-two.

Aliens Are Asked to Refrain From Disturbance

New Haven, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—An appeal to all foreign born in this city to refrain from taking part in any disturbance arising out of agitation among sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti has been made by Ernest C. Carpenter, executive secretary of the Americanization committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Carpenter was President Coolidge's teacher in the public schools in Plymouth, Vt.

"Now, my friends," Mr. Carpenter says, "do not let anyone draw you into any disturbance. It will do Sacco and Vanzetti no good and may do you great harm.

"If the United States government found anyone taking part in a riot, it would be difficult for that person to ever become a citizen, and such a one might be deported and never again be allowed in this country."

BOMB BUENOS AIRES COURT

Buenos Aires, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—A bomb exploded at the Palace of Justice early today. The damage was slight.

The explosion of this bomb came a short time after an explosion at the railway station of Velez Sersfield, near Buenos Aires. There were no victims, but a few freight cars were damaged.

Slight damage was done to the Velez Sersfield station.

Another supposed bomb was found on the tracks of the Southern Railway.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The police have announced that they found an unexploded bomb in the centre of the city.

All commercial establishments were closed and the city presented a holiday aspect. No newspapers were published.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Streets and port traffic was totally paralyzed for three hours as a consequence of a strike called in protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The newspapers did not publish.

AMERICANS IN PARIS APPEAL TO FULLER

Paris, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—"To show the French people that all Americans are not in favor of the execution of two innocent men," in the words of the organizer, Rabbi Fabian Fisher, a meeting of Americans to express sympathy with Sacco and Vanzetti was held on the platform were Prof. Harry Dana, grandson of the poet, Longfellow; William Ogburn, William Trent, Henry Alsberg, who presided; Rabbi Fisher, and Louis Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

After listening to speeches, among them one by Isadora Duncan, the dancer, the meeting resolved to send a message to Gov. Fuller, saying:

"We Americans, assembled in a mass meeting in Paris, make a last appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti."

It was the only meeting of the night in Paris, for the agitation seems to be subsiding.

Few demonstrations were staged in the provinces, notably at Bordeaux, where 2,000 Laborites paraded in orderly fashion and sent a message to the American ambassador asking pardon for the two men.

Appeals to President Coolidge and Governor Fuller have also been sent under the signatures of a number of prominent French persons, among them M. Louchuer, former minister of commerce; M. Caillaux, former minister of commerce; Mme. Curie and Alfred Dreyfus.

JUSTICE RUGG IN HOSPITAL

Worcester, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Massachusetts Supreme Court is a patient in a hospital here following an operation preliminary to another which will be performed presently.

As a result he cannot participate in any way in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, should it get before the full bench of the Supreme Court.

Beadle Gets Life Term

Franklin, La., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Sentenced to death, Morgan City trapper was sentenced today for his part in the murder of James L. Lebouef, Morgan City utilities man.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Newport's Elect Very Much Taken Up With Revival of Theatricals at the Casino This Summer

THEATRICALS AT NEWPORT ARE DONE WITH a grand opera flourish. Soft lights in the Casino Theatre gleam on pearls and diamonds, ermine and satin. Newport's high and mighty turn out for this, their newest pastime, wearing their purple and fine linen. All of which makes a gorgeous spectacle in the pretty little theatre of the Casino that owes its existence to the genius and foresightedness of the late James Gordon Bennett and Stanford White. The generosity of the one and the artistic creativeness of the other have made the small theatre a gem of its kind. And Newport society, filling it to overflowing for "The Devil's Disciple," dresses the scene magnificently.

ONE OF THE HANDSOMEST OF MATRONS IN the distinctly smart and important audience was Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, of Boston, Newport and Lancaster. Mrs. Thayer wore a wrap of silver cloth with a froo of uncurled ostrich at neck and hem. A single enormous emerald, set in platinum, gleamed on her corsage. And pearls were about her throat and in her ears. She had in her box the Countess Carl von Moltke, the former Cornelia Thayer, who is in this country on a round of visits and has reached Newport and the Thayer villa in this progression. The Countess was in gray from head to heel, a tint that set off her cool blonde coloring to perfection. She, too, wore ropes of pearls set at intervals with diamonds.

MISS MARTHA CODMAN brought a party to the Casino Theatre for the Tuesday evening performance, as did practically every other Newporter of place and prominence. In the Hubert Gould Shaw box young Mrs. Gould Shaw, handsome in a black frock, was hostess. William H. Vanderbilt, down as one of the box holders, looked briefly in on the gorgeous scene. Mr. Vanderbilt cares naught for the pomp and ceremonies of the social set to which he belongs by right of birth and possessions, but, however much he may shun the limelight, he is a marked figure in any assemblage.

THE MOSES TAYLORS HAD one of the stage boxes and entertained a group of friends. That society has taken up most enthusiastically this revival of theatricals at the Casino is much to Mr. Taylor's liking, for he is a leader in the movement. A number of young people filled Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames' box. Mrs. Ames is one of the season box holders and her daughter, Miss Mary Ames, frequently entertains there. Last evening Miss Ames was in a silk frock of rose.

MRS. R. GOULD SHAW, JR.
Society leader entertained at Newport Casino Theatricals.

MISS NATALIE MERRILL, Summer in the Berkshires, wore again in Newport after a Winter in Boston and an early fringed frock of smoke blue and a wrap of ermine. Mrs. Julian Robbins, mother of the talented Julia Hoyt, was all in white. Her gown of white moire, her white shawl with fringes a half yard long and the diamonds that twinkled from chains and eardrops made an extremely handsome ensemble.

The Misses Winslow Lend Much Brilliance to Social Scene

THE WINSLOW GIRLS WORE some handsome frocks and some gorgeous wraps. They added not a little to the bright picture. Miss Natalie Winslow, slender and blonde, was in a dull black frock of crepe that gleamed with hundreds of tiny rhinestone studs.

MISS THEDORA WINSLOW wore earrings of jade in enormous hoops, with her frock of jade and Miss Emelie Winslow was in peche. Each girl wore a marvellously embroidered shawl. The Misses Winslow, daughters of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cameron McRae Winslow, are three of Newport's smartest young girls, their frocks and jewels always the envy of the multitude.

Where's Emily?

by CAROLYN WELLS
Author of "The MYSTERY GIRL"

Story of a Girl Who Did Just What She Chose and Then Took Flight

The two went across to where the Swami and Emily were talking together a little apart from the rest.

Emily Duane, an "ultra modern," is about to marry Rodney Sayre, scion of an old New England family, a conservative. Emily, parenticss, is extremely wealthy, charming, high-spirited and impulsive. What she wants, she wants—and gets. Novelty allures her and her latest fad is the Hindu cult, with Swami Lal Singh as teacher.

The wedding is two days away and Burton Lamb, Sayre's chum and best-man-to-be, Nell Harding and Betty Bailey bridesmaids, and Pete Gibby, Betty's beau, are discussing the plans with Emily and her Aunt Judy. The Reverend Mr Gardner, who is to officiate, and "Spinks," the wedding director, have gone by the board, and the company is getting ready for a rehearsal of the wedding when Polly Pennington and her husband, Jim, arrive.

Jim is explaining to Betty Bailey that he does write 'those plays'—

CHAPTER III.

"Why not?" and Betty's round, chubby face registered fine indignation. "Girls nowadays can go to anything evil, we anything evil, hear anything evil—"

"You sound like the Japanese monkeys," Pennington laughed at her. "And don't say 'nowadays' to me! I'm not your uncle."

Jim Pennington was a man of thirty, but to flapper Betty he seemed a generation removed. He was an erratic playwright, some of his work achieving marked success and some falling flat. One of his plays had been suppressed and others ought to have been, but there were not quite popular enough to make it worth while. He was not distinguished looking in any way, but his bored, languid air and his soft, drawling voice had an attraction for some women.

He made slight appeal to Betty, however, who liked her men louder and funnier.

"How'd you come to marry your wife?" she said, feeling she ought to startle a playwright.

"She made me," returned Pennington, straightforwardly.

"Why, what a churlish speech!"

He stared at her and comprehended.

"Um, he laughed. "I didn't mean it that way! I mean she was the making of me—of my career. Her sympathy and help—"

"I see—your dearest friend and severest critic—or whatever it is. She's very beautiful, too."

"Yes; if she weren't quite so pretty, she'd be the most beautiful woman in the world."

"Does that mean anything?" asked Betty, idly. She was bored with the man, and didn't want to waste any sparkle on him.

"Not to you, I dare say. Are you to be maid of honor?"

"Yes, and Mrs. Pennington is matron of honor, I know. We'll go well together."

"Watch your step, then. Polly is a marvel when she's in regalia."

"Sure I," returned Betty; "what's she going to wear?"

"Lord, I don't know. Let me see—she showed me—oh, well, nothing short of a complete Carmen costume brings out her best points."

"Yes, I can see that. She's a perfect Carmen. That wonderful black hair—those eyes—even the very way her cigarette droops from her lips. Do you care for any other woman, Mr. Pennington?"

"Woman? No. Women? Yes. I adore many of them. May I adore you?"

"Fraid I haven't time. There are so many enticing strangers here. Look at that man who just came in! Is he the one they're all crazy about—"

"Yes, he's the Swami. His name is Lal Singh. I think he's a faker."

"Fakir with an i or an e?"

"All the same. Want to meet him?"

Betty did and the two went across to where the Swami and Emily were talking together, a little apart from the rest.

"Do we intrude?" said Pennington, lightly. "Miss Bailey wants to meet a real, live celebrity."

Lal Singh bowed, gravely accepting the compliment.

Whereupon Betty monopolized him and Emily turned to Pennington.

"In the present room. Oh, Penn, look at my necklace! Isn't it perfect?"

At this moment Polly Pennington came toward them. "Yes, Emily it's awfully good. Might have been heavier—"

"Not at all. I wouldn't have it of larger stones. Just because Fenn gave you a Kohinoor—"

Polly held up her chin, as it to

BOULDER DAM ROW NEAR END, WORK SAYS

Custer, S. D., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The seven Colorado River States will agree on the Colorado River compact at an early date, thus assuring action at the next session on a Boulder Canyon dam bill, Secretary Work told President Coolidge in their discussion of the matter at the Summer White House

Los Angeles, Aug. 10. (A.P.).—The report of Secretary Work to President Coolidge in which the interior secretary was quoted as expressing confidence that the seven Western States involved in the Colorado River compact would make an agreement at an early date which would assure passage of the Boulder Dam bill through the next session of Congress, was skeptically received in the West today.

The Boulder Dam bill would provide for the building by the government of a great flood control and power project near the mouth of the river. Most of the disagreement has been between California and Arizona over the proposal for division of power royalties from Boulder Dam.

Mulford Winsor, secretary of the Arizona Colorado River Commission, said, in reply to Secretary Work's prediction, that "the report is unauthorized as far as Arizona is concerned. The Colorado River compact has no relation to the Boulder Canyon Dam nor any other dam."

HINT U. S. NAVY PLANS 18 10,000-TON CRUISERS

Washington, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—While no official statement has been made, it is understood here that in proposing a cruiser tonnage of from 250,000 to 300,000 at Geneva, the American government figured upon a maximum of 18 10,000-ton cruisers for this country. Eight such craft now have been contracted for and the other ten undoubtedly will be authorized by Congress in the near future. The speed with which they are to be built probably was one of the subjects discussed by President Coolidge and Secretary Wilbur at Rapid City.

NEHRING GLIDES IN AIRPLANE 32 MILES

Berlin, Aug. 10. (AP).—Herr Nehring, one of Germany's most successful gliding experts, is credited with a remarkable feat at the gliding competitions now under way in the Rhoen mountains, central Germany.

He manoeuvred his motorless plane to an altitude of 600 feet, traveling over hills and valleys for a distance of 32 miles.

Falling Fliers Escape Death in Fire at Westport

'OLD GLORY' PILOT IS UNIQUE

By LLOYD BERTAUD
Like Hill, One of the Air Mail's Most Famous Fliers

Perhaps some people wonder what we do to while away the time when we are flying the night mail alone.

Sometimes I have counted the stars by the hours, and then when the final star has been counted I have started all over again. It used to be I could mark ten minute intervals by counting 20 stars, and 120 stars would be an hour. 600 stars would be my trip with the mail from New York to Cleveland.

The flyer who holds a unique record for telling time without the aid of a watch is J. D. Hill, my co pilot on the New York-Rome venture. It was on a night two Whitters ago, when the weather reports were extremely bad, fog and snow being reported almost along the entire stretch from Cleveland to New York.

Particularly was the weather bad over the Alleghany Mountains—the toughest stretch in the New York-Cleveland air mail route. In this section there are 200 miles of distance over which a person must fly at an altitude of not less than 9,000 feet, for fear of crashing the plane in among the ridges that shoot up precipitously.

CIGARS SAVE HIM

Bad weather seldom stopped J. D. from carrying the mail. I remember J. D. coming onto the field at Cleveland and glancing at the weather board preparatory to his return flight East with the mail to New York. The board warned that flying was not safe on this night. J. D. squinted his eyes in characteristic fashion, and for moments later the roar of his plane was heard as it went up into the foghound night.

This was in the days before instrument flying—before the art of blind flying had become a science. Somewhere before reaching the Alleghany Mountains J. D.'s watch stopped. Flying a little better than a hundred miles an hour, J. D. knew that it usually took him about an hour and twenty minutes to pass the danger zone above these ridges.

To save himself and plane, J. D hit upon a novel idea. He remembered that by leisurely smoking it usually took him forty minutes to finish his cigar. He smoked one and then a second, and when he had blown the last puff of smoke from it, he dipped his plane down through the mists of fog and sleet and made a blind, but safe landing on the field at Easton, Penn.

From there he took on another load of gas and carried the mail on to Hadley Field, N. J. I dare say that the two cigars saved him from a serious crackup that night.

HUMAN HOMING BIRD

The boys all call J. D. a human homing bird. There is something about him that reminds you of a quiet animal whose place is in the air.

One night in the Winter of 1926 when J. D. was flying eastbound from Cleveland, there were

50,000 DIE IN CHINA'S DISASTROUS QUAKE

Peking, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Fifty thousand dead in the Liangchow district of Kansu Province, as a consequence of the earthquake of May 23, is the latest Chinese official report as sent from Lanchow by Monsignor Theodore Buddenbrock, of the Steyl Mission at Lianghchow.

The clergyman who sent the first detailed account of the quake in China's "Wild West" province, says in a communication:

"We are sitting in the midst of the misery produced by the great quakes. Shocks are continuing daily, but without damage, owing to the wholesale destruction of May 23. Half-starved persons are wandering about the district.

TO REDEEM 2ND LIBERTY BONDS

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Plans of the Treasury for redemption of the Second Liberty loan, of which approximately $1,276,000,000 is outstanding, were disclosed today by Acting Secretary Mills in an address before the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Funds necessary to retire the issue on November 15 will be obtained from sale of obligations which will mature on a future quarterly tax payment date.

Further reductions in the amount of outstanding seconds are anticipated before November 15. At the time of the sale of the new obligations they will be offered in exchange for the old.

"When the entire transaction is completed, of $3,104,000,000 of seconds, many will have been retired for cash," Mr. Mills said, "others will have been exchanged for a long time bond bearing a materially lower rate of interest; others into three-five-year 3¼ per cent. notes, and others into short term certificates carrying a low rate of interest."

WALES USES LEFT HAND IN CANADA'S GREETINGS

Brandon, Man., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales is saving his right hand. He has had so many hands to shake since he arrived in Canada that he frequently held out his left hand in greeting during his brief stay in Brandon on his westward journey.

Among those he greeted were 240 members of the Canadia legion, he having previously expressed a desire to meet them. Each of the ex-servicemen was given a hearty handshake by Premier Baldwin, who is traveling westward with the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George.

There are no speeches, no formal replies to formal addresses of welcome, the distinguished visitors just strolling along amid the crowd, laughing, chatting and shaking hands.

FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO

Fatal injuries were received by Mrs. Annie Rood of Townsend street, Roxbury, today when she was run down by an auto at Whittier and Downing streets.

Thomas E. Mulvey of Bowers road, who was crossing the street at the same time, sustained injuries. The two victims were taken to Roxbury Hospital on Vernon street, where the woman was found to be dead upon arrival.

According to witnesses, the auto driven by Michael A. Hickey of Aspinwall avenue, Brookline, continued on its way after knocking down the two pedestrians.

Reaching Tremont street, the car collided with a small truck owned and driven by Nicholas Cosmopulos. The truck was overturned. Firemen of Engine 13 gave chase and the driver of the automobile was captured by Engineman George Scott, who turned him over to Patrolman Cunniffe.

Hickey was booked at Station 10 on charge of drunkenness.

GUARD DYNAMITE STORED AT MILFORD QUARRIES

Milford, Mass., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—To forestall the possible attempt at removal of any of the dynamite stored at the granite quarries here, the selectmen today ordered the chief of police to place special police guards over the various stores.

Women Lose Fight For Beauty Parlor Course in School

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 10 (A.P.).—An attempt of women members of the city board of education to equip a beauty parlor in the vocational school here for training girls interested in the profession was so frowned upon by male members of the board that the motion has been withdrawn.

L. H. Spillman, chairman of the board, declared that the board should be more interested in teaching the girls to make corn bread and to keep house.

FLEE FROM BURNING PLANE

Fall River, Aug. 10.—Lieutenants Harold Green of Medford and Ray Taplin of Quincy, reserve aviators, narrowly escaped death today when their plane was forced down in a field on the outskirts of Westport and burst into flames.

Uninjured by the abrupt landing the aviators got away from the machine before it took fire and was destroyed.

The airmen had flown from the Boston airport to Hound Hill, the South Dartmouth estate of Colonel Green. After a visit they took off again for Boston and while flying over Westport one of the gas tanks went dry. The aviators made a landing in a field.

Salem, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Fire early today swept through the cabinet shop and woodworking mill of John E. Kimball & Brother in Briggs street and an adjoining storage shed and garage of the American Barrel Company. The loss was estimated at $25,000.

"TAMPA" CIGARS MUST BE MADE IN TAMPA

Washington, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Federal Trade Commission held that it was unreasonable to call a cigar a "Tampa" when it was actually made in Pennsylvania, or to brand one "Havana" when it was manufactured in this country from domestic tobacco.

A cigar is a "Tampa" only when it is produced in the Tampa, Florida, district, the commission ruled, and it is a "Havana" only if it contains tobacco grown in Cuba.

clouds, made of snow and ice, and there was freezing temperature and J. D. found himself trapped between a low layer of fog and skies in a narrow valley in Central Pennsylvania.

There, in that narrow valley from which there seemed to be no escape, and flying blind, J. D. saw a half dozen wild geese in the same fix himself. In their struggles to escape J. D. and the birds passed and repassed each other many times.

Finally, J. D. found an opening in the clouds of ice and flew out of the valley. Since that Winter I have often heard J. D. mention those birds—wonder whether they, too, found the opening through which he had safely made his getaway.

Somewhere between Dubois and Clearfield, Penn., there is a big buck deer that owes its life to J. D. A few months ago when taking the day mail east from Cleveland, J. D. was flying at an altitude of about 5,000 feet above these two points in the mountains. Below him J. D. saw hunters, and around the side of a mountain he saw a big deer—the prey the hunters were stalking.

Pointing the nose of his ship to the ground, J. D. dropped to an altitude of about 400 feet. The deer had now gotten to a position where in another moment they would have trained their guns upon the animal. A fleeting glance from the deer at the ship—and he was on his way, safely out of reach of the guns of the hunters.

When William Randolph Hearst made it possible for me to fly the monoplane "Old Glory" on the proposed trip to Rome and return, I was told I might select anyone whom I chose as co-pilot and co-navigator. Naturally, my thoughts turned to the U. S. Air Mail service. I have been a member for the last three years, and there is the mail service my thoughts went immediately to J. D.

If I didn't think he was the greatest man who ever flew, I would not want to be in the ship in which he will be at the controls while I am sleeping in the rear compartment.

J. D. is a veteran of the 6.6 school; a stern example that flying is no child's play. Past the age when most men think it is too late to fly, J. D. is now in the prime of his air existence.

ESCAPES DEATH AS BIG DERRICK OVERTURNS

Concord, N. H., Aug. 10 (A.P.)—L. T. Gully, Boston & Maine engineer, narrowly escaped death this morning when at wasty-five-ton derrick overturned, pinning him inside. Gully extricated himself in time to avoid burns from steam and fire.

The lifting of a fifteen-ton piece of machinery caused the accident.

LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized by Mr. Edison.)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

AT the then thriving town of Milan, O., Thomas Alva Edison was born February 11, 1847, and as a very young child he exhibited those keen powers of observation which have contributed so much to his greatness. At three or four years of age he would watch by the hour trains of covered wagons camped in front of his home on their way to the faraway gold fields of California.

EDISON and Roosevelt, both with tremendous capacity for sustained activity and both of Dutch ancestry, were not strong as children. In fact the young Edison was almost fragile. Because of his "delicacy" he was kept out of school beyond the usual age. In his own words, he was "usually at the foot of the class." One teacher reported him to an inspector as being "addled."

EDISON'S mother, hotly indignant at the teacher's affront, took Edison's education under her own direction. He could not have had a more capable instructor, for she had been a school teacher of exceptional capabilities. Under her sympathetic guidance young Edison obtained a better education than would have been possible in any of the crude local schools of the day.

THERE was plenty of activity about the old home at Milan, of a sort that would deeply interest a child of Edison's serious mentality. Young Edison found the songs of the lumber gangs highly absorbing. At the age of five he had learned them all, an early indication of a memory which has built up a vast mental storehouse of information.

BROKER ADMITS MISUSE OF $75,000

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 10 (A.P.)—As neither the prosecution nor the defense was ready for hearing the case of Wm. B. Goodrich, president and treasurer of Goodrich & Co., Inc., investment brokers, charged technically with idleness, was continued today until Saturday.

Goodrich has been unable to obtain $25,000 bail required by police, but he and friends were seeking to aid him. He also said the estimate made by the police that he had misused from $150,000 to $200,000 of customers' funds and securities was too high, that he did what pleas the figure above $75,000 and that if he had had six weeks' time he would have adjusted all accounts and paid every cent he owed.

Chief of Police Smith took charge of all accounts of the concern and auditors will start on the books as a preliminary to formal charges by the city attorney's office. Scores of customers, living not only here but in other parts of the State, are now plaintiants against Goodrich, police said.

LEVINE TO HOP FIRST OF 3 IN OCEAN RACE

Paris, Aug. 10 (I.N.S.)—With every prospect in evidence that the transatlantic air race will be on within a few hours, three planes at Le Bourget Field were being subjected to last-minute grooming today, preparatory to a start when weather conditions improve.

While Leon Given and M. Corbu were making a final test flight with their Farman Bluebird, Charles A. Levine, who already has one transatlantic flight to his credit, was testing a two-man rubber lifeboat at Bois du Boulogne Lake, and M. Costa, long-distance French flier, was perfecting plans for a final wireless test flight with the plane he intends using in the Atlantic hop.

Popular opinion here favored Levine's Bellanca monoplane "Columbia," piloted by Maurice Drouhin, to get away first. Levine, accompanied by T. Harold Eckdale, Wright motor expert, discovered he was able to inflate the lifeboat in four minutes.

The "Columbia" probably will take off tomorrow.

M. Corta said he would be prepared to start as soon as the test of his wireless apparatus is completed. Given and Corbu indicated they would start when the "Columbia" takes off.

prejudice in the judge would mean that justice was tainted at the source. The committee report on that point should have been so explicit as to make impossible the suspicion that the judge was influenced by the accused men's revolutionary opinions or by anything outside the evidence in the murder case.

A cable just received announcing that the judge declines to postpone the execution causes anxiety among officials here and in other countries. A small bomb exploded in London's subway today as a Sacco-Vanzetti warning is out of the usual run of Communist activities.

England, allowing absolutely free speech and barboring without question such men as Kropatkin and Lenin in the past, has usually been exempt from Communist or Anarchist activities.

Conservative French papers ask the Communists why they do not take up some of the Russian executions of Socialists, etc. One paper's front page says: "No more Anarchists will be executed in Russia, because they have all been shot already."

The Earl of Oxford and Asquith, seventy-four, has devoted his life to the service of his country, never using time or talent in building up a fortune for himself. Friends have arranged privately to give him an annuity of $12,500 a year. Because he was formerly Prime Minister, he is entitled to a pension of $10,000 a year from the British government, if he cares to take it.

A great part of Britain's strength is in the unselfish service and devotion of her silent men, devoting their lives, energy and intelligence to the public service. You find in British government service such ability as you find in American steel, motors and railroads—and such statesmanship as you find nowhere else. Ask our geese of the Washington conference.

Ralph Arnold, a distinguished California geologist, says the government must protect the nation's oil supply, "or the supply necessary for national defense will be gone in seven years."

That statement interests President Coolidge.

The government, having taken back its naval oil reserve from those that stole it, announces that it will leave the nation's oil in the ground, "to conserve it," buying oil elsewhere. That would seem sound, but the plan includes this: "Neighbors adjoining national reserves may pump out the government's oil, exhausting the supply. Those neighboring pumps will be compulsed to give the United States a small percentage of the extra profit that they make by pumping near the government's wells."

What good will that little money do this richest government when she finds herself without oil in a war depending on gasoline supplies?

Halperin Boys Enlist With Inspiration

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—Inspiration Pictures is taking a new lease on life. The company which formerly boasted of Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish and Richard Barthelmess is coming back into the production field with many promises. No less a person than J. Boyce Smith, vice-president of the concern formerly headed by Charles R. Duell, assures us that the coming year will see a great increase in production activities.

The Halperin boys, Victor and Edward, who have been making pictures in New York on an independent scale, are the first unit to join Inspiration. Their arrangement is patterned along the lines of the Edwin Carewe-Inspiration deal.

I think we can be hopeful that "The Garden of Eden" to star materialise as a Corinne Griffith picture. There were a few days when it looked dubious. Corinne herself, who recently joined the army of deposed husbands at the Garden of Allah, or the Ralph C. Allmon—as some wit puts it—has been signed to play the role of Glessing. My information is that Glessing is a very wicked person and that Lowell, who knows his stuff when it comes to being a he-vamp in the movies, has one of his typical screen roles.

Dolores Costello's little sister, Helene, may be located at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. John Stahl has engaged her to play the leading feminine role in "Old Kentucky," Charles Dazey's famous play.

I realize I have a single track mind. Perhaps I shouldn't have, but once I get myself parked at a studio I usually spend the afternoon so if my column shows a preference for United Artists today you will know the reason. Anyway, I learned one thing that interested me. Don Alvarado, Spanish leading man, has been chosen by David Wark Griffith for the romantic lead in "A Romance of Old Spain," promised D. W. I wouldn't tell the name being used on the script. Yes, it's that bad.

There is no indication that Harold Lloyd chose August 15 for his trip to New York with any malice aforethought. Yet he couldn't have picked a more popular date so far as Eastern travel is concerned. On that day Jack Dempsey and his retinue, with Estelle Taylor Dempsey, are leaving Hollywood for Chicago. A nurse will accompany Mrs. Dempsey and she will not be permitted to see anyone en route. That is the only condition under which her physician would permit her to accompany Jack.

Just a moment, please. The Marquise de la Falaise is also taking the train for New York August 15. He sails for Europe immediately—a necessity brought about by State regulations that demand that he limit his visit to this country to a certain number of months. Gloria and Henry were at the Montmartre lauding at different tables. "I suppose the rumors of our divorce will be more widespread than ever," said Gloria. Gloria had just come back from Catalina for a day. "I came back to see Henry—believe it or not," she said.

The average investment of the 13 entrants in the Hawaiian flight is more than $15,000. The citizens of Dallas, Tex., put $25,000 in the fund to back their favorite flying son, Captain William Erwin.

Miss Mildred Doran, Flint, Mich., school teacher, was the only woman left in the Dole Derby entries today as the result of the withdrawal of Mrs. Erwin, wife of the Dallas flier.

London, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—A coroner's jury today decided that Louie Fisher, refrigerating engineer of the United States Shipping Board steamer American Trader, died from "natural causes," and that Mary Waite, twenty-four, stewardess, did not intend to do him "any grievous harm" in pouring acid over him while he slept. Fisher died at sea Friday.

Captain Hubbard Chester Fish testified Miss Waite told him she threw the acid on Fisher to disfigure him, because of his attentions to other women, and had no idea of ending his life.

COOLIDGE GOES TO DEDICATION

Keystone, S. D., Aug. 10 (A.P.)—On a towering granite mountain rising proudly in the midst of the Black Hills was begun today a gigantic memorial to four American Presidents who charted the course for their country's progress.

The mountain from which the figures of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt are to be carved was so deep in the forests that President Coolidge, with the leading role in the dedication, had a saddle horse reserved here for him for the four-mile journey to Rushmore, the name by which the immortal rock is known.

The program today called for the principal address by President Coolidge, his first prepared speech since coming into the Black Hills. Senator Norbeck of this State was to preside and brief talks were to be made by prominent South Dakotans.

COURTNEY HOP OFF 48 HOURS

Southampton, England, Aug. 10 (A.P.)—Owing to adverse wind reports Captain Frank T. Courtney decided at 9 a. m. that he would not make an attempt this morning to fly to Valentia, Ireland, on the first lap of his transatlantic flight. He had been studying weather conditions since 3 a. m., at which time his flying boat, the Whaleh, was made ready for the hop-off, as he expected to get away about 6:30 a. m.

Courtney announced that the start would be postponed for 48 hours, owing to the adverse weather.

Charts and weather reports showed 40-mile head winds over several parts of the proposed route, but the fliers waited hopefully, thinking the conditions might improve. Courtney and the two men who are to accompany him, R. F. Little, mechanic, and F. W. Dodd, assistant, had examined their flying togs, but as unfavorable reports continued to arrive, the trio decided it would be unwise to start.

Fans Watch Sox And Cheer Carrigan Bill Real Genius

Delaney's Comeback Jack Must Kayo Foe Woodchopper Tough

By Nick Flatley

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1927

BOSTON FANS STILL CHEERING FOR RED SOX

BILL CARRIGAN and his interesting band of young baseball performers have the whole city of Boston praying and cheering for them as they set forth to do their act on foreign fields. The Red Sox have rekindled real interest in the pastime in this section of the universe. The recent surge, in which the team won twelve games out of fifteen played, hauled a lot of oldtimers out of the retirement they have been practicing since the long ago pennant days.

Nick Flatley

Boston has been begging the fates and the sport gods and everybody else for a team for a woefully long time. The fact that Carrigan, the former idol, was able to shake his gang of misfits into a hustling, winning aggregation, even over a short stretch, convinced the faithful that prayers were being answered finally.

The Red Sox cannot, to be sure, keep up the dizzy pace of the past fortnight. That isn't being done, even by the champion teams. But the Red Sox can and will play hard baseball and win a lot of games. And that's all the boys hereabouts want.

Bill Carrigan is a fine manager and the chances are that he will haul his team out of the cellar. Such an accomplishment will be just as great a baseball miracle as ever was accomplished. The Boston team was a wreck and ruin as short a while ago as the end of June. Neither the material nor the spirit was present.

Carrigan developed his material and manufactured the spirit. That was the quick work of genius. In half a season, after ten years' absence from the game, he started the uplift that has been attempted vainly ever since Frazee wrecked the team. Boston will be happy if the Braves can catch the Sox spirit and get to doing things. Two good teams at the same time would go a long way toward helping the boys to forget the horrible past.

IF THE YANKS WOULD SLUMP LIKE OUR SOX HAVE SPURTED, THE AMERICAN LEAGUE RACE WOULD GROW INTERESTING.

With the big fight, the World Series and football all rolled into a couple of weeks, sport fans will need a lot of national prosperity.

MONS. UZCUDUN NO SETUP FOR DELANEY

JACK DELANEY, the sharpshooting battler from Bridgeport, endeavors tomorrow night to prove that he belongs up where the big money grows in boxing. Jack, having modestly cast aside one title because there wasn't enough in it, is now on the trail of another.

He meets a tough boy in Paulino Uzcudun, the much managed Woodchopper of the Pyrenees. Paulino never will be a champion, but he isn't exactly a setup. He's built like one of the sturdy pines, or whatever they are, of his dear mountains, and he doesn't tip over easily.

Only a glutton for punishment could stand as many managers as Paulino is infested with. He isn't a punishing fighter, so Delaney will not be worried about the danger of a knockout, as he was in the Maloney row. It was a healthy respect for the punching power of James that caused Jack to haul himself into a shell that evening, and not the barber's itch, or a tennis elbow or any similar trouble.

The fight can hardly have much bearing on the heavy title, anyhow. Delaney will have several large obstacles to hurdle before he gets up near a real shot, if he does lick the axeman. He will have to flatten that youth to make his case anything, and that does not seem to be a soft assignment.

Delaney must win at least three fights to get back to the popularity he enjoyed before the Maloney scrap. And there will not be another title war for a year, or so. Tomorrow's meeting is relatively unimportant, but it will draw a big crowd. You can't discourage the fight fan.

BASQUE HAS COLD AND BOILS

Delaney Will Box In Garden Today to Prove Arm is O. K.; Small Gate

By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Jack Delaney was to engage in a workout at Madison Square Garden gym today so that doubting New Yorkers might have an opportunity to see him in action before he faces Paulino Uzcudun in their 15 round bout at the Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

Pete Reilly, Delaney's manager is anxious to prove that there is not anything to the report that the Frenchman is suffering from a sore arm or any other alleged injuries which were advanced as alibis after the Bridgeport battler was beaten by Jim Maloney.

The master minds of the Delaney camp have also probably figured it out that it will not injure the drawing powers of the show if Brent Dyer should be forced to box a strenuous session with Jack Renault, New Hampshire pugilist, in addition to three rounds of mitt work.

Jack Conway

Deputy Boxing Commissioner Eddie Curry made a special mission of Paulino's camp at South, N. J. following the latter's arrival here, to the Steamship's condition. It found that Paulino is suffering from a slight cold, and that he has a boil on his right forearm. These handicaps, according to the twelve members of the Public Committee, do not interfere with the Spaniard's knocking out Delaney tomorrow night.

That is what they are saying today. In the event that Delaney does win, the Garden will be able to promote a return bout with Paulino before the latter leaves this country.

Delaney has been ordered to drop around to the office of the Boxing Commission and put his name on the dotted line, so he'll be in line for the championship. Pete Reilly has already gone through this formality.

The Delaney-Paulino show has been buried under the Dempsey-Tunney shadow. However, there is a small crowd expected to see the Spanish Basque and the Bridgeport battler in action.

It now looks as though the show will be fortunate if it gets a $125,000 gate.

In an effort to make it appear that the Delaney-Uzcudun fight is a real attraction, Promoter Humphrey Bogart has announced that a number of ringsiders have been placed in reserve as an indication that something happens to either Dempsey or Tunney.

Jack Sharkey has also been promoted to the job of sparring partner to Paulino, Sharkey replacing Jack Delaney, who is back on the vaudeville circuit.

'I'LL WIN OVER ANY ROUTE'

That Is Gene's Reply to Report He Demands a 15-Round Go

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, Aug 10.—"I beat Jack Dempsey in ten rounds a year ago; I ought to be able to do the same thing now."

That was Gene Tunney's reply today to stories that he would ask that the Illinois law be waived in order to set his match with Jack Dempsey at the Polo Grounds big distance. In a long distance telephone conversation with the writer, the champion indicated that he felt he is a perfect able to take care of himself either 15 rounds or a marathon.

"If anybody says I am asking that the distance of the fight, they are saying what is not true. All I can say is that I am satisfied with any arrangements I may be ready when the time comes."

Tunney already has gone into more or less active training at Speculator, N. Y., according to his own story. The noted recluse apparently is taking everything, including himself very seriously and is running much the footed over the trails of Herkimer in his strenuous effort to prevent himself to the best

Munn and Ferguson Await Gong Tonight

MONTE MUNN, Nebraska Man Mountain, and Lightning Dick Ferguson of Lynn, the honorable Honolulu Kid of other days, will swing into a ring tonight in the feature ten-round bout at the Argonne A. A.'s show at Braves Field.

Shower made it necessary to postpone Saturday night's Eddie Mack to put her battle off until tonight. All Eddie asks is an even break from the Weather Man and he will offer the fans plenty of pugilistic thrills.

The postponement failed to ruffle the ardor of either Munn or Ferguson. Both men rushed back to their training grind. Munn, who has knocked out 13 opponents in 14 starts in the short course of time he has graced the roped arena, went to Jim Lydon and Lydon put him through the finishing touches of his training.

Munn, who is being touted to the top by Jack Kearns, who directed Jack Dempsey's path to the heavyweight championship, is one of the few remaining members of the fistic fraternity who can boast of 35 starts in the ring today. In spite of his busy campaign in the ring, meeting all the hardest punchers in the business, Munn does not carry a scar of battle.

Both fans will be interested in the appearance here of Mr. Munn. As an indigenous male, educated son of Gotham soil, Munn has all the attributes of a champion. He has an even disposition and is quite capable of talking on any subject.

Munn and his likeable manners have made many friends since he arrived here and his size has impressed everybody who has seen him. He is a veritable giant in the ring and there is no reason why his praises should not be sung within the next year.

Surrounding the main attraction, the Argonne Club will stage two four-rounders, four six rounders and an eight rounder, all of which should provide plenty of excitement.

On account of an injury to Pierre Gardin of France, the club has been forced to call off the bout and to add expense in procuring Dieter Roberge to clash with the big "Wop" Maudlin in the semi-preliminary.

In the opening bout Charlie Mahan of Merrimac Square will mix with Eddie Holmes of Dorchester. Cute Curly Lawrence and Joey Ross of the North End.

Eddie Lopes of the West End carries a lot of confidence into the ring when he tackles Dempsey Nissan in a six rounder. Jimmy Barrett, Cambridge, is carded to swap punches with Georgie Forbes of the South End while Spike Hennessey of Waltham pairs off with Duncan Ball Cote of Lewiston.

Boxers Heed Call of Children's Camp

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON gave particular attention to a letter he received today. After reading it several times, the veteran tossed it across the desk to me. And I read as follows:

"A couple of months ago, Mr. Boston, you wrote a story about the Floating Hospital. You told how each morning on your way up the harbor from Pemberton you used to see the Mercy ship were covered in by canvas so that the little patients in the cots out on the deck would be sheltered from the wind. As I read your story, I could see those fever stricken youngsters out there on the deck of the Mercy ship fighting that they might live. I could also see the smile of happiness on the faces of crippled youngsters who were getting the only harbor sail of which they knew anything.

"When I got through reading your story, I mailed a check to those in charge of the Mercy City. And so did many of my friends.

"It was only the other day that my attention was called to another charity which I think ranks with the great work of the Children's Vacation Camp at Sunset Point, Nantasket. Like the Mercy ship, it is open to members of all races and creeds. The only requirement for admission is that you must be poor and suffering of the city.

MADE inquiries and found that this camp cares for 600 poor children during the Summer. Daily youngsters are given a vacation each week. They receive an opportunity to play in the sunshine and win back lost health.

"I saw youngsters with white faces and sunken cheeks, others with twisted limbs and deformities of different kinds. I then realized what a wonderful work is going on at Sunset Point.

"It seems that a fund of $10,000 is needed each year to enable this charity to continue. And, of course, the good people of Boston and New England always see that the necessary funds are raised.

I WAS talking with a member of the committee for the garden party to be held at Sunset Point on Saturday in aid of this charity. I wasn't surprised when he told me that our boxers were once more going to do their bit for this glorious affair.

"Sammy Fuller, Al Mello, Honeyboy Finnegan, Rocky Stone, Jack Donahue, Johnny Vacca, Laddie Lee and many other stars of the ring have agreed to drop down to Sunset Point on Saturday night to box a few rounds.

"I know, though, that there are a great many people who will be unable to attend the garden party at Sunset Point who will be anxious to assist this great work. I would suggest that they send donations to Mrs Daniel Lynch, 0 street, Allerton, Mass. I hope, Boston, that you will write something in your column about the Children's Vacation Club. I don't think anybody who is told of those 50 tiny tots with their precious little human treasures will fail to fall in line and do something for these youngsters if you call the matter to their attention.

(Signed) "M. M."

MR. BOSTON lifted his eyes when we stopped reading.

"I guess you can run that letter as is," he said. "I know I couldn't improve on it. And before I forget it take this small donation and mail it to Mrs. Lynch."

MELLO-DUNDEE BOUT PLANNED FOR BOSTON

Al Mello, the Lowell welterweight has started training for a series of bouts which Bobby Goldman, his manager, is arranging for him.

Several prospective bouts are in sight for the hard-hitting Lowell boxer, the most important of which may be a ten-round battle with Joe Dundee, welterweight champion of the world, at Fenway Park under the direction of the Suffolk A. A. Tom Goodwin, Suffolk matchmaker, is negotiating with Max Waxman, manager of the champion, and it is probable that the Mello-Dundee bout will be the high spot of the local outdoor season.

Previous to that bout, Mello will probably box Billy Leonard in Syracuse on August 22. Leonard has defeated Clyde Hull in Madison Square Garden, has been a persistent challenger of the Lowell southpaw and Goldman plans to send his charge against Leonard in the latter's home town

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

When you take the club back as we described yesterday you will find that because of the low-hanging position of the hands at the start, the right elbow will be close to your side, at the top of the back swing (Fig. 2) and not pointing outward and upward. (Fig. 1.) This one fault keeps many golfers playing a poor game for years because it is such a common fault. Because of the strength of the right arm it readily jumps into play, whereas all it does in the back swing is just "ride along," there being practically nothing for it to do until the moment of hitting arrives. When it swings out and up in the back swing it upsets rhythm and the smooth flow of the action usually [illegible]

GENE TUNNEY

World's Heavyweight Champion

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THERE are some people who may have the opinion that because I have not fought for nearly a year that I will need plenty of hard work—that I ought to be at it now. If I had been doing nothing but idling through the year, or if I have forgotten any of the golden rules of an athlete, then perhaps I would need a month or six weeks of strenuous conditioning.

But, right now, I am no more than ten pounds above the weight of 158 pounds that I carried into the ring against Jack Dempsey nearly a year ago. I expect that I will weigh around 158 for my next fight. So that would mean that I am now only about seven pounds beyond the poundage that I will train to acquire.

So far as the year of absence from the ring is concerned—well, I am not considering it at all to my chances. For it must be remembered that I was idle for almost a year before I fought Dempsey and then was able to put up what many regarded as the greatest fight of my career—and against a man who then was champion of the world.

Perhaps a year added to my age has slowed me slightly; perhaps that added year has fractionally nulled some of my fighting forces. But what of that? Isn't Dempsey a year older, too?

I haven't fought in a year. But I have taken care of my physical and that counts tremendously. So I am not worrying over any athletic decay through not having defended my title.

I promised my friends that despite the year of loafing between 1923 and 1926, I would be in perfect fighting form for Dempsey in 1926. And I promise them now that when Dempsey and I square off once more, I will be in perfect condition.

LADDIE LEE KNOCKS OUT McINTYRE IN FIFTH

Portland, Me., Aug. 10.—Laddie Lee of Portland and Boston knocked out Johnny McIntyre of Corinna, ex-Nova Scotia welter champion, in the fifth round of a scheduled 12-rounder here. McIntyre had kayoed Lee a year before. The blow, a left-hand right to the jaw, came after McIntyre had jumped into the lead in the first four rounds.

ARMOUR-FARRELL TO PLAY AT NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Tommy Armour, open golf champion of the United States and Canada, and Johnny Farrell, winner of several tournaments this year, will appear on the Yale golf course next Wednesday, August 17, in a special match against Ben Thompson, professional at the Yale course and Bobby Andrews, New Haven Country Club professional.

The match will be an 18-hole best ball affair, with a purse for the winners and an added prize for low individual score. The course record of 74 four over par, is held by Thompson. Such leading amateurs as Francis Ouimet, Paul Hayland, R. Hand Mackenzie have been unable to better the record.

SUFFOLK BOOKS FINE PRELIM CARD

True to his word, Tom Goodwin matchmaker for the Suffolk A. A. has rounded up the finest collection of fistic talent ever assembled on a card in this city, to support the New England featherweight championship battle between Sammy Fuller and Johnny Sheppard at the Arena one week from tomorrow night.

Joe Monte, sensational young heavyweight from Stockton, will meet Jimmy Madden of Roxbury in the eight-round semi final bout.

In another eight-rounder Newsboy Johnny Brown, another tried and true fighter who has never failed to give satisfaction here, will meet the rough tough rassling Irish boy from the South End, who knocked out Johnny Moore in his latest local start.

Another eight rounder will serve to introduce Jacobo Donoghue of New York, national amateur featherweight champion of a few years ago who won 160 out of 163 amateur bouts. Donohue, now making his home in Boston, will tackle Al Delmont, Jr., of the North End, a youngster who promises to follow in his father's footsteps.

In the three four rounders, Danny Sears, latest knockout sensation from East Boston, will meet the best obtainable opponent; Jack Donohue former Boston College football star will make his debut as a boxer in a bout with Eddie Johnson of Quincy, and Irish Dan Cronin the hard-hitting Somerville heavyweight will throw his punches at Andy Engle whom Tom Goodwin calls the Russian Eagle."

NEW ENGLAND TITLE SWIM EVENT AT RANGELEY

Miss Margaret Sheehy of Whitinsville will defend her 100-yards free style New England A. A. A. U. swimming championship at the Rangeley Lakes water carnival, at Rangeley, Me., next Saturday and Sunday.

H Lincoln North is chairman of the program.

JACK DEMPSEY

Tells of Comeback

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SOME fighters look like a million dollars in their training camps; others look like bums. I guess I belong in the latter class for I've yet to know the day when the experts found themselves really exercised over the stuff I was showing in my tune-up outings.

Once in a while down there at Saratoga, I'd get a squint at some of the papers that commented about my workouts. The boys said I looked bad, terrible, awful and gave the world the impression that I was just about to die of this old age stuff.

But the stories weren't new—only the date lines over them were new. For I remember what I trained for Firpo in 1923. They gave me the crushed raspberry and they said I was the world's worst champion. But I got right out of the camp and knocked out Louis for a few loops.

Whether I was good or not in my camp prior to the Sharkey fight the point is that I shifted from Saratoga into New York and made the fast and speedy and very clever Sharkey cry "uncle."

SO what a fellow does in a training camp does not always indicate what he is going to do in the ring. Rather, it usually is something that he won't do in the ring.

When I went into training for Sharkey, I changed my whole style of fighting—upon orders from Leo P. Flynn. I began to experiment with a new stance, a new way of going into my man and a new way of punching. I was, when all's said and done, rebuilding myself in a fighting way.

Naturally, I wouldn't look good at that not for a long time anyway. But the boys sort of overlooked that. I was trying something new. What I wasn't doing my old stuff and they just figured that "the old Dempsey is gone" without telling the folks that a new Dempsey was being forged and getting ready to do his stuff.

IN all my other fights I always crowded into a man head-on. That left me open for a left jab, a right cross, or an uppercut. So Flynn worked me out in some secret sessions to perfect a new way of going into a man, a way that would perhaps be the means of saving me from getting injured in the jaw when I was boring in close.

I put that idea into effect with Sharkey. When I went into him it was unlike the old way I had of getting close to a foeman. I lunged into him in such a way that my left shoulder crashed into his left shoulder.

The idea worked out nicely with Sharkey because when I was going in in that way he could not aim me with success. He had only a rare few chances for an uppercut and he certainly never landed many right crosses to my chin because I was always lunging into his left shoulder out of range of his right hand.

WHILE I was in camp at Saratoga, I practiced that trick first of all in private. After I got it working fairly well, I kept practicing it in my public workouts.

Naturally, a fellow never shows up very well for quite a while if he is trying out something new and different. Going all he looks bad especially if he happens to be a newspaman.

"But" as Flynn remarked one day when I told him that I must look like pretty much of a rotsock out there, "results are what count. You're improving right along. You'll just be about ripe the day I lay you off training. After that you go into Sharkey, fight just the way you've been practicing—and it'll be a cakewalk for you."

IT was—but that Sharkey made me do a whole lot more stepping than I had figured. He gave me a tougher session than I looked for, and I was mighty glad, after I weathered the storm in that first round, that I had a jumping shuffle—or the shuffling lunge—to use from time to time on to stop him from banging me around until I could bang him

First of Series on How to Can Food Supply

By MARTHA LEE.

THE end of a perfect summer is usually the beginning of the canning period, and the conscientious housewife usually faces the fact with a groan. It's a wise woman who knows her "garden truck," and a very fortunate woman who has a garden.

But those who did not need some [illegible] space. A little wise shopping in the markets will yield a good return of your favorite fruits and vegetables and in the dead of winter the family may depend on the convenience of [illegible] out of season.

That is, if you know how to can. Those who have [illegible] know how and a great many now and [illegible] data set forth in the series of canning articles that will [illegible] early in this column. The [illegible] which can not be [illegible] pantry. These articles will be [illegible] soon. For full details watch [illegible] page from day to day and [illegible] own particular and personal problems. I am always waiting to help you if you will just drop me a line.

Today we [illegible] methods—first the good old fashioned or [illegible] canning. [illegible] the last dozen years or so the [illegible] method was practically [illegible] all gave excellent results with fruits and many housewives still [illegible] method.

The fruit is packed until tender and cold [illegible] from the hot [illegible] jars which have been [illegible] sterilized or sterilized [illegible] ing. The jars are [illegible] quickly [illegible] can [illegible] to heating all air [illegible] ple to the [illegible] and are slightly [illegible] weld to reduce air content to a minimum.

The jars are sealed as [illegible] as new [illegible] and not many housekeepers [illegible] except for tomatoes, which [illegible] so much and that they can be [illegible] without [illegible].

[illegible] these canning—In cold pack canning the food is cooked in the jar. This may be done with a water bath equipment in which the jars are kept at boiling temperatures or in a pressure cooker in which higher temperatures can be [illegible] and the time of processing [illegible] reduced.

Canning in the water bath may be by the one-period method or the three-period or intermittent method. The one-period method is widely [illegible] and [illegible] and when [illegible] the [illegible] entirely successful in all kinds of products [illegible] dog and poultry and fruits [illegible] and meats [illegible] and meats.

A demonstrator who specializes in packing chicken raw and processing it by the one period method has done this work for several years in many [illegible] without a single case of [illegible] to [illegible] reported. The advantage of one period work is the great saving in labor. The canning process is begun and completed in the same day.

The intermittent or three-period method is used in some parts of this country, for the sake of greater safety in sterilizing non-acid vegetables and meat. The food is packed in the same way as for one-period canning but it is processed in the jars at boiling temperature for three successive days for 45 to 90 minutes each day.

If bacteria develop after the first processing they will be destroyed in the later periods. The intermittent method is not necessary for acid fruits or tomatoes or when a pressure cooker is used.

The equipment needed for cold pack canning is a good canner (Water bath or pressure cooker), fruit jars of some standard make, new rubbers, jar lifter.

If the work is done in the home kitchen the necessary pans and other vessels for washing, blanching, cold dipping and other processes, also spoons, packing sticks, etc., will be available from the household equipment.

Water Bath Canner—This may be a commercial canner made for the purpose or simply a wash boiler or other large utensil with a well fitting cover and a wooden or wire rack in the bottom to permit the water to circulate under the jars. The rack is a necessity to prevent the jars from cracking as they are likely to if they rest on the metal bottom of the canner.

You may prefer to do a few jars at a time while you are baking or getting meals. For this purpose an ideal canner is one of the large granite ware kettles with straight sides and close-fitting cover. These are inexpensive, easily handled and convenient for many household uses.

Steam Pressure Cooker—The last few years have seen rapid development in this useful type of apparatus, and there are now a number of excellent pressure cookers on the market. They are substantially made of aluminum, fitted with a steam gauge, a petcock for the escape of steam, and a safety valve. A pressure cooker is practically a miniature canning factory, enabling the housewife to get the high temperature and pressure used in commercial canning.

The reduces the time of processing, which is important when considerable canning is done, and practically eliminates danger of spoilage in canning meats and non-acid vegetables.

Don't forget that I'm right here waiting to help solve your particular canning problems, and also remember, there are special canning demonstrations in the Martha Lee Kitchen daily at 11 and 2.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

An Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

ACCORDING to custom and convention, a man seeks a wife who is a few years younger than himself. The average girl of eighteen is a young woman with a grown-up consciousness and viewpoint. The average boy of eighteen on the other hand, is still very much of a "kid," interested in the games and sports of childhood, diffident about meeting girls of his own age or older. A girl of eighteen is a congenial mental companion for the average man of twenty-two or more years.

Women also age earlier than men as a rule. How natural then, that women should look to men older than themselves for companionship and as life partners.

There are numerous exceptions to the rule that men choose to love and marry women younger than themselves, particularly now that women are learning to prolong indefinitely the spirit and appearance of youth.

A reader writes:

"I have been keeping company with a widower of about forty. I am twenty-five, but I look younger. I have learned to care very much for him and have become the more attached to him because we are employed in the same place of business.

"Recently, I met a young man about twenty-eight years old. He is of good character and could make a comfortable home for a wife.

"My parents insist that I give up the older man and keep company with the younger one. My parents insist that I will be unhappy if I marry the widower.

"Do you think the fifteen years difference in our ages will prevent my father and me from making a success of our marriage? Should I break with him and make the most of my opportunity to keep company with a younger man? A READER."

Are you and your widower really congenial in every respect? Is it just because of the difference in ages that your parents object to him? Aside from this one possible reason for objection, would he be a suitable husband for you?

I can see no reason why, if you can answer yes to these questions, since you care so much for him and are always happy when you are with him, you and he should not be very happy in your marriage.

For May to marry December is always futile. But there seems no sensible reason why June and October may not in some cases prove congenial.

Do not make too much of a "theory" of a few years difference in ages. Use good sense and judgment and make the most of life's glorious gift of love.

Keep House Clear of House Flies

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU must keep down flies, the nasty house fly, in your own house for two reasons. First, you must protect yourself and your family against the disease-carrying propensity of flies. Secondly, you have no right to breed flies in your own house simply to infest your neighbor's house with them. That's the ethics of the fly question.

The adult fly appears and begins to reproduce with the advent of warm weather. The maximum number is reached in August or September, but they may continue to breed until frost comes. Generally, however, they become lethargic in October and begin to get under cover in warm places, such as cookhouses, or bakeries. They breed chiefly in horse manure, which provides the necessary moisture and heat. Manure at over 40 degrees F., however, will kill fly larvae by causing fermentation. Flies seldom breed in horse manure that has been dried and spread thinly on the ground and rarely use cow-dung because of its wetness. Ordinary garbage is too acid to make a good [illegible] hatching ground.

The female fly lays about a thousand eggs during the Summer. The rate of development depends upon temperature [illegible] for breeding and food supplies for the larvae.

Flies are the prey of birds [illegible] sards, toads, wasps, spiders and [illegible] besides numerous internal parasites and a microscopic fungus. Fowls and ground-feeding birds eat many larvae in manure heaps, and swallows, martens and chaffinches eat them on the wing. These should, therefore, be protected. Flies probably hibernate in the pupa, not the adult stage.

Keep flies out of your house by screens. When one gets in, kill it. If the flies do get in and get the start of you, there are several ways to get them. A one-fortieth solution of [illegible] lead to lime water sweetened with molasses and poured on plates painted yellow, will lure two or three small pieces of bread added, are effective fly traps in hot weather when moisture is scarce. They should be placed on shelves at a convenient height. This solution is not dangerous. It should be neutralized by making up with lime water, a half water, a half. The plates should have a broad rim, and a most successful form is a saucer placed upside down with a solution put into the shallow central [illegible]

You're missing something!

FAMOUS cooking experts will tell you, very emphatically, that you're missing a lot if you don't make use of Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk in your cooking! You're missing the greater richness and smoothness that this form of milk gives, and you're missing the greater convenience and economy that come from its use.

Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk is really two ingredients in one. Fresh, pure, full-cream country milk, ready-blended with sugar. Much more smoothly blended than you could possibly do it at home. And super-rich—more than twice as rich as ordinary milk—because most of the water has been removed. (Bottled milk, you know, is 87% water.)

For any dish that requires both milk and sugar, Standard Milk is a better milk. Test it and see! It makes richer, creamier desserts of all kinds. Wonderful cake icings, pie fillings, candies. Smoother salad dressings. More even-textured hot breads . . . And there's no waste to Standard Milk. It stays fresh, pure and rich for days after the can is opened—even without ice.

You need this milk on your pantry shelf. Get it today from your grocer. Write to the Borden Company, 350 Madison Ave., New York, for a recipe booklet. And, by the way, try Standard Milk tomorrow morning in coffee! You'll be amazed at the golden richness it gives—the smooth, heavy body and mellow flavor. And think of the saving! Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk creams-and-sugars your coffee for only one-half the cost of separate cream and sugar!

A Story of Sylvia Byrant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, society woman and wife of Vance Ackerman, a rich broker, appeals to a mutual friend, Alexander Ladd, a successful lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd persuades Mrs. Ackerman to install Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, in her home as her social secretary. Ackerman admires Sylvia's beauty and charm, and Stuart Gifford, a cousin, falls in love with her. Ackerman takes her to the theatre; Margot sees them and they adjourn to a cabaret.

Ackerman starts drinking and to get him away Sylvia feigns illness and he takes her to the Ackerman home. She hears a soft knocking on her door.

CHAPTER 15

SYLVIA felt Stuart's hand tightening tenderly around her own. A warm power in this halffurtive caress sent a persuasive current eddying mysterious in her breast: a swift instinct of feminine caution warned her and she drew her hand away from his reluctant grasp.

"Tonight—about ten o'clock," he said softly. "When the big yellow moon comes up . . . here . . . just you and me. . . ."

He was almost smiling, yet there was an instant appeal in his eyes.

"Please, Sylvia . . . promise?"

He was so boyish that she was tempted to tease him; yet there was a conflict in her heart that forbade making fun of him. Too, there were queer, tremulous afterrun, a bewilderment of emotion in gentle agitation. It would be definitely pleasant, she realized, to be out here in the night, isolated in a sea of moonlight, with Stuart Gifford.

"I might," she admitted, "want to do a thing and not do it. I have observed one thing about you, Stuart: you never stop to think. We find one taste of scandal in Boston; we don't want it repeated here. We can't stroll off into the hills at night together—"

"The others needn't know," he said quickly. "The house is dead as a tomb by ten o'clock. This hick-couture stuff has been putting them to bed with the chickens. All we have to do is just step up a little later than the rest and when they're all safe in the hay—why, we just stroll off. What could be sweeter?"

"It must be glorious out here on this ledge with the moonlight flooding the valley. . . ." She laughed lightly. "It does seem a shame to let it all go to waste, doesn't it?"

"For a little while we'll be in a world all our own," he breathed. "Imagine it—a glorious, golden universe populated by just the two of us. There's never been anything quite like it, Sylvia. In my life. Doesn't it make Boston seem tawdry and cheap and commonplace? It's so beautifully pagan, dear, that it takes my breath away. Out here, hanging between heaven and earth—we'll be supreme, untrammeled—we'll be like the god and goddesses of ancient Greece. You, Aphrodite, goddess of love, basking in golden radiance."

It was the first time any one with magic in his voice had made love to Sylvia. In her breast was a slight swimming sensation. Her gaze softened and Stuart Gifford, imperceptibly, became something of a day finer than mere human.

"We're dated for the moonlight, then?"

She did not look at him. "Why not? I don't want to miss anything that's wonderful and beautiful, Stuart. Yes, I'll come if you want me to."

They moved slowly back along the half mile of tangled path that led to the cottage. A reaction was upon them now and they presented their recent mood in an invisible secrecy; because each was conscious of a poignant sensation they laughed and talked of commonplaces and gave themselves up with gusto to the physical activity of swinging onward at a pace that put color in their faces. Of the coming tryst no word was spoken.

A hail from the veranda reached them. Joyce's voice:

"Stuart . . . telegram . . ."

He answered her with a carrying unintelligible shout and a wave of the hand.

"Imagine that—a telegram reaching me here," he said, in surprise. "I suppose it came to the railroad station and they phoned it up over the rural line. Now who could be telegraphing me?"

That, he did not learn immediately. Joyce knew hardly anything at all about it.

"I didn't answer the phone myself," she said. "Vance was taking a nap and I was washing my hair. Alexander answered it."

"Well, where is he?"

"I don't know, I'm sure. He was here a half hour or so ago."

"Didn't he say whom it was from?"

He merely said when I asked him that he had received a telegram for you that was phoned up from the station."

Stuart turned humorously to Sylvia. "Can you beat it?" Somebody takes the trouble to wire me and everyone around here treats it as though it were a picture postcard. Probably the office—they're the only ones with my address. Still, I can't think why."

A negro maid appeared on the veranda. "Mistah Gifford—Mistah Ladd says will you please an' be so kind as to step into his room?"

"Now we're getting somewhere," he said decisively.

Alexander Ladd, when Stuart entered, was puffing thoughtfully on a pale, fragrant cigar. "Oh—you're here!" he said, roused from abstraction.

"Joyce said you took a telegram—"

"Yes, I did. Won't you sit down—for a minute? It seems I have intruded, entirely by accident, into some of your private affairs, Stuart. When I answered the phone the telegraph operator said he was going off duty right then and unless someone took the message it would have to be held over till tomorrow morning."

"That's quite all right," Stuart said.

"Thanks a lot."

Ladd paused a moment and looked at the end of his cigar.

"I'm rather sorry I took it a message though," he said, slowly. "It was from a girl named Winifred."

Stuart Gifford's face set suddenly and lost a shade of color. "Winifred—I don't believe I—what in hell does she want now?"

"You ought to know," Ladd remarked. "She wired, 'Get in touch with me at once. Am desperate. Love. Winifred.'"

'Where's Emily?' Tells of the Swami's Fascination show off better the diamond pendant that had been her wedding gift six years ago.

"Funny for you to have the Rehearser, Emily. What's the idea?"

"Oh, everybody does now. Of course, six years ago, such a think was unheard of, but its, a great discovery, really."

"I think Spinks is the undertaker."

"What of it?" Can't he undertake a wedding as well as a funeral?"

"Oh you give me the creeps—"

"Don't come to rehearsal, if you feel nervous about it, Polly dear."

Emily was not of a catty disposition, but Polly Pennington, though one of her dearest friends, often rubbed her the wrong way.

Moreover they were rivals for social queendom.

Emily, as a belle and heiress, was easily first with the younger man, but Polly, who was really a married girl, had a long list of admirers.

The two girls were opposites as to character, Emily being daring, unafraid and impulsive.

Pauline, nearly seven years older had learned to be diplomatic, discreet and careful.

Her timidity was a mask and she meant it be known as a mask. Beneath it were fires of many ores, which she concealed as per pleasure.

Emily's personality was frank, free and open. Pauline's was deep, mysterious, hidden.

Yet the two were friends, after a fashion, and Emily never fought Pauline with her own weapons of sarcasm and pettish faultfinding, unless goaded to it.

And during the preparations for the wedding, Pauline had been especially irritating. Both jealous and anxious by nature, she resented Emily's triumphs and sought to be little the elaborate plans.

"Oh, yes, I'll come," she answered Emily's suggestion. "I want to see what the undertaker person does. I never should have had such a think at my wedding."

"Of course not—seven years ago," Pat."

"Well, s'y, then. You see, modes were very different then. How would I look having the sort of wedding you had?"

"What do you know about it? You weren't there!"

"No, I was in the nursery. But, now, the Rehearser is a regulation thing, one has to have him. You'll see."

"And that Spinks is a general utility man. Why, he manages Brides Games and costume parties."

"Of course he does. He attends to everything except undertaking—"

Emily stopped suddenly, and quickly changed the subject. There had been one great tragedy in Pauline's life, the loss of her baby.

She worshipped the child really idolized it, and when the little thing died of croup the night before the christening day, Polly Pennington almost went mad.

Highly strung and nervous of temperament, she was a long time regaining her poise and her health.

Her friends even now were careful not to mention children or christenings in her presence and Emily's slip was a real catastrophe.

She turned quickly toward her pair at her side. Betty and the Swami.

The Hindu would, she knew, distract Pauline's attention at once.

"Come with me, Betty," she said peremptorily. "There's some one I want you to meet."

Betty was enjoying herself and didn't want to leave, but the look on Emily's face compelled her, and she obeyed.

"Whassamatter?" she said curiously. "You and Polly had a spat?"

"No. Keep still do."

She shepherded Betty across the room toward a man who had just come in.

A man much older than the rest, a man who gave the effect of an elderly beau, which, indeed, is just what he was.

Abel Collins, sixty or thereabouts was the friend of all the world.

He had been a friend of Emily's parents and had known and loved the girl all her life.

His bright, blue eyes gleamed from beneath shaggy gray eyebrows and his gray hair, a bit long, curled at the ends.

He was good looking in the sense that he looked good and his attire was immaculate, if not quite of the latest mode.

He put an arm around Emily without speaking to her, and held out a hand to Betty, as Emily introduced them.

"My godfather," Emily said, "and my guide, philosopher and friend My adviser and general supervisor, my mentor and tormentor—"

"There there," Abel Collins interrupted. "I'm sure Miss Bailey knows enough about me now, to last the rest of her life. Let a think of something else."

"Talk about me," said Betty, promptly. "I'm maid of honor, and I'm next to the bride in importance, now, and as soon as she goes off with Rod, I'll be top of the heap. I guess you'll be glad then that you know me, Mr. Collins!"

"Oh, I hope so," he returned, "my dear young lady, I truly hope so And if you'll only behave yourself—"

"Now, now," said Betty, taking to him at once, "don't set me too hard a task—"

Seeing the two fairly launched on a gay conversation, Emily slipped away from Abel Collins' clasp and went to Savre's.

She slipped naturally into Rodney's circling arms and joined in a spirited discussion he was having with Burton Lamb.

"You're crazy, Burt," Savre was saying; "what do I care what Emily does—"

"Why, why!" Emily said, smiling up at him as she felt his arm tighten round her. "What's the wild Lamb-kin saying to make my sweetie talk like that?"

Her perfect faith and trust left no room in her heart to imagine that Rodney's words cast any aspersion upon herself, as indeed they did not.

"He's a goat," Rodney informed her. "And he's also an interfering old cuss and a general rotter. Want to know any more?"

"I do," said Emily, "I want to know it all. First, the subject of the debate."

"No debate about it," Lamb said, with some heat. "I merely told [illegible] that you're planning to marry, that you had been [illegible]

"Why?" and Emily was suddenly serious.

"Because, Emily dear, [illegible] man is a friend [illegible] I'd be a poor friend [illegible] the holy name [illegible]

"But my dear [illegible] piece of you to [illegible] And to [illegible] had believe [illegible] But you see I didn't pass him at money, I only added a [illegible] that he she [illegible] But if I should I [illegible] I intend to be [illegible] and the [illegible] the good graces of [illegible] Lamb—"

"Never mind the lama, he can spout the lore of Farther India, or whatever it is, father than any Orse, as far as I ever knew before. And his talk when he's alone with you, would charm the birds off the trees."

Savre bent down and kissed the top of her head, to show that he was not seriously roused by this revelation.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

Doctor—But I can't cure your husband of talking in his sleep.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

IT'S 75 years ago since thousands of young men grabbed up their picks and shovels and rushed out to California. And today, hundreds of girls are following in their grandfather's footsteps; they're digging for gold in New York's night clubs.

ANY time you see a young lady flirting with a customer, the chances are she's making out her claim.

EVERY speak-easy is a mining camp.

AND every sap is a bonanza.

ALL the pretty little prospectors wink at each other, which means, "There's gold in them there wallets."

PICKS and shovels are obsolete. They can get better results with baby talk.

THE average girl will saturate her claim with gin. The mining is easier where there's a lode.

THE richest veins are usually found in tuxedos.

MOST of the feminine forty-niners are expert assayers. They can tell at a glance just how much gold can be gotten out of a dress suit.

PLUCK is the keyword to success and they pluck everybody who comes along.

IF the early bird doesn't catch the worm, a night hawk usually gets him.

ONE man thought of a clever idea. Before he went out the other evening he put mouse traps in all his pockets.

AND by 11 o'clock he had caught three fingers and a thumb.

HE was so tight that one gold-digger lost two knuckles and eighteen dollars.

HE may have looked like an ever-green, but she started trimming the wrong tree.

A LITTLE bush isn't always a sapling.

MEN are becoming smarter lately, and even an experienced gold-digger is satisfied nowadays if she can get her hands on a little quick-silver.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN love dies there is always a discussion, at the autopsy, as to who KILLED it!

Because real, true, honest-to-goodness LOVE never dies a natural death or of old age. It is always murdered, and most people could collect a perfectly good accident insurance policy on their dead loves.

There are a hundred ways—some of them violent and some of them merciful—in which love may be put to death.

* * *

Sometimes it dies of slow starvation, and sometimes of over-feeding and acute indigestion.

Sometimes it is frozen to death—and sometimes it is smothered to death. Sometimes it is bored to death; sometimes it is choked to death; and sometimes, just burned out!

* * *

A man is no more to blame, when he ceases to love a woman, than he is to blame when he ceases to be hungry or thirsty or sleepy.

* * *

The emotions can be overworked, just as the brain and the body can be overworked; or they can perish for want of exercise, or faint for lack of nutriment.

* * *

What most love needs is a REST CURE! There is nothing like it for "that tired feeling" which annoys women and all men experience, after a too long and too steady diet of romance and kisses.

* * *

Love, like the tide, comes and goes, wanes and wanes. And more love has been killed by a woman's desperate effort to keep it at high tide every moment, than in any other way.

When a man reach's the point where he begins to arrive a little late for his appointment, to seem restless, and to want to go home a little early, it is a sign that he needs a temporary REST from your society and your caresses.

* * *

When a girl reaches the point where she smothers a yawn between kisses, and her eye wanders hopefully to the door at the stroke of ten, it is a sign that she is getting sentimental indigestion and should be put upon a starvation diet for a few days.

A little absence, a little separation until the TIDE begins to turn would save many a perfectly good love from an early grave!

But can we let each other ALONE? Oh no! This is the point at which a woman begins to cling and weep and reproach a man for "not loving" her. Or a man tries to resuscitate a woman's love with accusations, and jealousy and recriminations.

* * *

Alas, why can't lovers just leave each other ALONE, when the tide goes out, and then rush back eagerly to each other, like the waves to the shore, when it comes in again?

* * *

Every love needs a little Rest Cure, now and then!

Radio Dialog

By C. WILLIAM RADOS

"YOU know, Bill," complained Whit, "there is not much left for us to broadcast. Every kind of musical performance, from fights to speeches by dukes, has been radiated. While we always keep a couple of princes and presidents in stock they spoil in this muggy weather. What is there new and novel that we can broadcast?"

* * *

Well, Whit, there are many, many novelties that have never been broadcast. For instance the "moo" of the Franklin Park elephants at ten in the evening. People who roam about the park at night hear those weird, awe-inspiring sounds.

* * *

Weddings, funerals, christenings and speech when the tire goes flat have never been broadcast, Whit. You might try your hand at some of those.

The reception to Lindbergh was broadcast. How about broadcasting other receptions. For instance, the reception to the monthly bills. The reception to the heir and only son, who went swimming when he was supposed to practice the piano. And then there is always the reception to the wife returning from her vacation.

* * *

One local broadcaster might try increasing his power a bit so that houses twenty miles from Boston could get reception as formerly.

Children Cry For Fletcher's
CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotel, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

America's Pro-Consul

The Cause of the Common Defense Forever Linked With Leonard Wood's Name

Leonard Wood died as he lived and did his work—simply, cheerfully, bravely, devotedly, for the cause, "in the line of duty."

He played a versatile role in American life as citizen, surgeon, soldier, statesman, patriot, leader of men, inspirer of youth, guide, philosopher and friend of dependent peoples.

Here was a typical young American who entered college without influential friends to help him, without any money except what he earned while he was studying.

Yet by the time he came to middle age his talents and his splendid traits of character had won him success in three widely different fields of endeavor.

Two Presidents—one a Democrat, the other a Republican—called him as a young man to the White House to serve as "The Beloved Physician."

For more than forty years he accumulated a brilliant military and administrative record, first in the Geronimo campaign, then as first Colonel of the Rough Riders, then as Military Governor of Santiago, as Governor of the Moro Province, as Commanding-General of the Philippines, as chief of staff, as "The Father of Plattsburg," as the organizer and trainer of more than two divisions, one of which saw distinguished service in the great war, and the other of which was made ready for service.

He was undoubtedly the American army's most brilliant soldier of his generation. As chief executive of Cuba and of the Philippines he has won the admiration of the world and brought new honor to the Stars and Stripes.

Leonard Wood rests from his labors. History will do him justice. His fame is secure. The record of his noble life, so simply lived, will express the American spirit to generations yet to come.

To the country that this truly great American lived and served so unselfishly Leonard Wood leaves a precious legacy in the causes for which he delighted to the very day of his death to spend and be spent.

The world will appraise the sincerity of what the American Government and the American people say now about Leonard Wood by what they do for the causes indissolubly linked with his name, the cause of the common defense and the cause of American responsibility to dependent peoples under the American flag.

Hopping Off

This Is a Picture of Life in Years to Come

STARTING FOR HAWAII, ERNEST L. SMITH'S PLANE FLYING OVER SAN FRANCISCO.

This shows what traveling life will be a few years hence, when all long traveling will be done through the air.

The great City of Oakland, where enormous fortunes will be made in real estate and other ways in the next few years, has built a Pacific Coast airport of which the country may be proud.

This photograph shows the airplane "City of Oakland" after it had left Oakland, flown across the beautiful San Francisco Bay, as fine a harbor as there is in the world, on its way to the Pacific, passing over San Francisco.

A few moments later it had sailed out above the Golden Gate, over the wide Pacific. News dispatches have told the rest.

The imagination is impressed by this picture of men flying over San Francisco's office buildings, flying west toward the setting sun, and on toward our beautiful islands in the Pacific Ocean.

Within a few years tens of thousands of airplanes, safer than street cars, infinitely surer and faster than railroad trains, will fly in all directions.

It is hard for us to realize these things, but they will come, THEY ARE ON THEIR WAY just as surely as the sun rises every morning far out on the Atlantic and sets out on the Pacific.

This picture is valuable because it reminds Americans in the East that there exists a great Western territory of which they know little, and of magnificent cities, such as Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, and many others where there was empty land, and a few Indians only a few years ago.

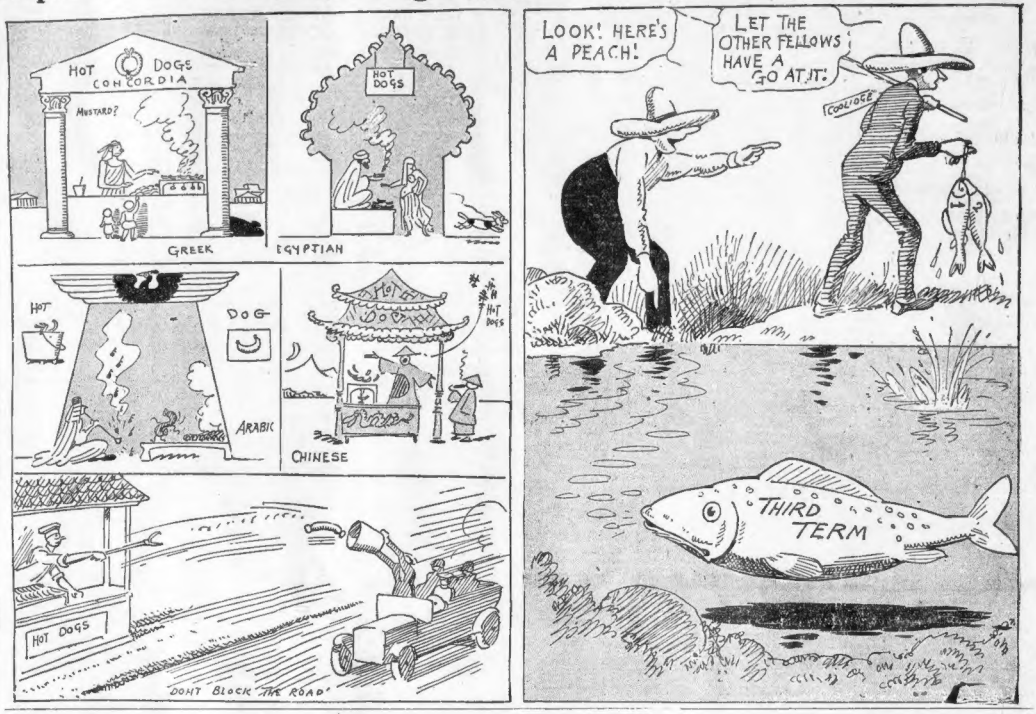
"Enough Is as Good as a Feast"

By T. E. Powers



ALWAYS SUSPICIOUS OF CLEVER PEOPLE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHETHER it is a phase of inferiority complex or not, it is true that people are always suspicious of clever people. They resent their cleverness as an implied superiority, and the best means for creating a prejudice against them is to pretend that they are cleverer than ourselves.

It is a favorite pose of lawyers before a jury to discard all oratory or arts of reasoning and proclaim themselves as simply presenters of facts.

Those who wish to enhance their own personal reputation may pose as clever men, but those who wish to gain their particular point renounce any appearance of cleverness.

One of the favorite arguments against doing business with other nations is to claim that they are much cleverer than ourselves, much more tricky and resourceful. Every nation wishes to consider itself as simple, faithful and trusting, and all others as wily and deceitful.

We heard a great deal about President Wilson's being taken in by Lloyd George and Clemenceau. We are now deluged with news to the effect that our representatives abroad in another conference are being cozened by the statesmen of other nations.

All this is pure bunk.

The Yankees are as clever as anybody and abundantly able to take care of themselves. If anybody leaves them with the heavy end of the stick to carry they will have to be pretty sharp.

Suspicion of foreigners is all too common and a frequent cause of misunderstandings. It would be much better to be honest and frank ourselves, to lay the cards on the table and to trust other people to do the same. Much animosity and antagonism are aroused by suspicion. Trust hardly ever arouses anything but trust in return.

A man some time ago wrote a book entitled, "My Neighbor Is Perfect."

If everybody believed in his neighbor and trusted him we would have much less trouble than we do at present.

It is often said that the Golden Rule needs an amendment. It is not only necessary to do unto others as you would they should do unto you, but to be bold enough to take the first step in trust.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THIS is the thing we have vowed to do; yield not and falter not, see it through! Likely the task that the years have brought, differs in much from the work we sought; lacking, perhaps. In all glow and gleam, not as we saw it in youth's bright dream; nothing of romance and glamour here, only the commonplace, drab and drear. Yet, we were born with a part to play; humble, it may be, or proud and gay; so there is only one thing to do; yield not and falter not, see it through!
This is the light that has led the race, up out of slime to its lofty place; this is the motto when souls are low; yield not and falter not, see it through!

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

STATE STREET: Financial center of New England. Messengers tied to their bags. Barber shops in many cellars. Down every alley the click of telegraph instruments and stock tickers. Smokers watching stock boards. Change Avenue: Six feet wide and an "avenue" that two stout brokers would jam. Three cellar restaurants in one building. Many flags on the street out every day. Like Lindbergh Day.

* * *

The Stock Exchange has its brass rails and guards. Inside are soft seats and well dressed men. It is well worth anyone's time to listen five minutes to the suggestions from any one of the 140 members of the Exchange. President Jere A. Downs was once in the newspaper business, so we may have a chance yet.

* * *

In no place except in a hotel can so much be crammed into so small a space. State street is just a street. But the broker has every comfort within reach. Tobacco shops and stands stock every necessity, including many imported goods little known to the general public. The bank president, if he has a sore foot, can send out for his lunch. Or for a barber, a lending library book, a clean shirt, or half a million dollars.

* * *

Hundreds of leaders can be seen here every day. In fact, it is just as common to have a bank president step on your toe as it is to see a movie actress in Hollywood.

Thomas Lawson was seen here every morning in the old days. He always wore a fresh carnation.

Former Governor Channing Cox keeps busy here now. Robert Weeks, of Liberty Bond Drive fame, now drives for more business. Joseph Kennedy, once the youngest bank president in Massachusetts, now has been attracted to the movies.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

TWILIGHT in the convent garden.

The vesper notes float slowly through the warm, sweet air.

The sky spreads like an azure veil behind the cypress trees.

One little star glows white and still above the darkening cross.

The shadows drip and gather in a purple pool, brimming across the moss-grown flags, the gray stone seat, lapping the Mother's patient feet within her shrine.

Now all is silver, black and heliotrope. Only one stalk of larkspur holds the sunset light and gleams above the garden like a sapphire flame. Tomorrow it will stand before the Host, lifting its beauty like a living prayer upon the altar of the One who gave it life.

This quiet corner of the convent garden is "God's Acre."

The flowers grown here serve in His House.

White roses, scarlet lilies, veined with ivory, wine-colored stocks, whose dusty sweetness perfumes all the air, thick, yellow disks of marigolds, confetti beds of pansies, copper, blue and brown, the spicy bronze of Fall chrysanthemums, and dewy purple violets in their time — they all grow in this corner that belongs to God. All flowers are sweet, but these the gentle sisters set apart for Him have comfort in them there is not in other flowers.

God's Acre, blooming by the convent wall.

Why not a portion set apart in every life for God?

A quiet space within each busy day when for a little while one rests with beauty and with love?

Beauty was not made just for Sabbath days, nor peace to dwell within religious walls. We all need to reach out and touch an unseen, friendly hand and sometimes catch a vision which is free from dust and pain.

God's Acre.

An hour made fragrant by its gentleness.

A little healing time of tolerance.

A noble resolution like a blossoming shaft, gold tipped with radiance.

Perhaps a prayer, too, as white and still as that small star above the cross.

God's Acre, blooming in your heart and mine, beyond the murky turmoil of our daily toil, safe from the storms that beat across our sky.
